Reagan seizes star billing

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

Ronald Reagan has seized star billing in the Republican presidential contest, and President Ford, suddenly second, may have to rewrite his campaign script.

But there are likely to be new twists in the GOP plot before it is played out this summer. There are, after all, 16 Republican presidential primaries to go. And there could be new faces in the campaign cast before convention time.

Noneteless, Reagan has for the first time established himself as a challenger who can convince the Republican hierarchy that he has a real chance of denying nomination to an incumbent president.

Even Ford's campaign manager had to acknowledge that Reagan had the advantage after making the President a three-time loser on a single primary election day.

It was evident in the numbers that made Reagan for the first time the leader in committed Republican nominating delegates and, perhaps as important, in the momentum and credibility the conservative challenger gained with two Southern victories and an unexpected triumph in Indiana.

Jimmy Carter, the dominant Democrat, won overwhelmingly in Indiana and in his Georgia home. He led in partial returns in the District of Columbia.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace won his home-state primary, too. Wallace offered testament to Carter's claim that as the likely nominee he can rally Democrats around him. "I could support him," Wallace said.

While Carter was speeding his bandwagon among Democrats, Reagan was cementing a remarkable comeback by gaining 51 per cent of the Indiana vote to defeat Ford by about 15,000 ballots.

The former California governor once was on the verge of elimination as a presidential candidate, with money running short after a succession of early primary election defeats by Ford. He held on and turned it around — for a second time.

Ford's allies thought they had finished Reagan in the early primaries, but he upset the President in the North Carolina primary on March 23, gained strength in Southern and Southwestern GOP state conventions, and scored a remarkable, 96-delegate sweep over Ford in Texas on Saturday.

Now it is the President who is skidding, although a spokesman said Ford remains determined and convinced he will win the Republican nomination.

But an outcome that had seemed inevitable to many Republican leaders no longer looks like a sure thing. And unless Ford can quickly repair the damage by dealing setbacks to Reagan the coming primaries, the race could begin to look inviting to some men now on the sidelines.

Should Reagan build on his current advantage, Republicans like John B. Connally and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller may see openings that didn't exist before. And that could draw more after the primary election season, which ends nine weeks before the GOP convention begins.

For the moment, the arithmetic reads Reagan. He emerged from the Tuesday primaries with 360 committed GOP delegates in his column. Ford has 292. That has not happened to an incumbent President seeking election in modern times.

Rogers C.B. Morton, Ford's campaign manager, said events had given Reagan "a sudden, and I hope temporary, advantage."

He said a major factor in that turn was the crossover vote of conservative Democrats who cast ballots in Republican primaries because of Wallace's virtual elimination from their party's competition. Reagan said crossover Democratic support was a virtue, proving he would have broad appeal as the GOP nominee.

There was evidence of a substantial crossover vote in the crucial Indiana race, although it did not approach that in Texas. Alabama and Georgia also were open primaries, in which a voter could go either way. And Morton noted that there will be six more like them. He said the Ford camp will have to find a way to cope with the crossover problem, although it wasn't clear what that might be.

The contests next Tuesday are in Nebraska and West Virginia, and both those states register voters by party, which precludes primary switches.

But this week's outcome may give Reagan next week's momentum. He said he thought the Texas victory helped him Tuesday. Indiana strategists on both sides said in advance that the Texas sweep would boost Reagan's showing, perhaps by five per cent. That was more than his margin of victory.

The votes read this way:

Indiana

With 94 per cent of the precincts counted in the Republican race it was:

Reagan 309,913, or 51 per cent.

Ford 294,724, or 49 per cent.

That awarded Reagan 45 Republican nominating delegates; Ford 9. The delegates were ap-

Greg Danner

Danner is selected for Brass Lab '76

Greg Danner, a senior at Sikeston High School, has been accepted to participate in Brass Lab 76 this summer in St. Louis.

Danner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Danner, 723 Mimosa St., was selected for the two-hour credit course at the St. Louis Conservatory of Music after auditioning April 25 for Carl Schiebler, who is in charge of auditioning french horn players for the St. Louis Symphony Brass Quintet.

Danner, who plays french horn in the high school band, is one of six french horn players selected to play with the brass quintet during seven-day course June 13-19 in St. Louis. Only the top 30 players auditioned are selected to participate in Brass Lab '76. The selections are usually made from college players. Few high school players ever pass the audition.

During the week in St. Louis, Danner will read brass quintet music, receive private instruction from Schiebler, participate in rap sessions with the other musicians and rehearse for a concert on June 19. The Bicentennial Celebration Concert will be held under the Gateway Arch and will be presented by the St. Louis Symphony and the Brass Quintet.

Danner began playing french horn in the sixth grade band, under the direction of Ron Williams, who also gave Danner private lessons for two years. Danner has continued his musical training through high school and now plays in the high school band, under the direction of Pat Curry, who also provides some private instruction for Danner.

The Sikeston senior has been selected to all district band the past four years and receive "1" ratings in state competition the past three years.

He plans to enroll at Southeast Missouri State University after graduation from high school and hopes to eventually major in music composition. He says he would like to write symphonic music and perform with a symphony. He would also like to "possibly" do some teaching.

Wounded motorist hospitalized here

Moses Grayson, 30, 209 Felker St., was admitted to Missouri Delta Community Hospital Tuesday afternoon after being shot in the left thigh along Highway 60 about 10 miles east of Poplar Bluff.

Grayson was able to drive to the Sikeston Police Station for help where he was discovered behind the police station lying on the ground next to his car.

Grayson told police he had stopped along the highway about 2 p.m. to urinate. He said he was standing by the road when he was shot in the thigh. He said no cars passed by and that he neither saw anyone nor heard a gunshot.

Grayson said he laid on the ground for a while and then crawled to his car to try to get help on his citizens band radio but was unable to raise anyone. He then drove to the Sikeston police station.

Petitioners seek chief's dismissal

ADVANCE--A petition asking for the dismissal of Police Chief Jerry Harnes was presented to the City Council Tuesday night by a group of about six persons.

The petition contained an estimated 200 signatures-and charges Harnes with conduct and behavior totally unbecoming a law enforcement officer.

The petition did not list specific incidents, but the controversy reportedly has risen over a run-in a few weeks before between Harnes and a citizen.

The board took no action Tuesday night, but agreed to look into the matter.

Harnes and the citizens have agreed to take lie detector tests to dertermine who is telling the truth in the matter, but no date for the tests has been set.

Speakers field questions

Listening to a question from the audience, at the Humanities Forum Tuesday night are, from left, Charles Bonwell, associate professor of history, Southeast Missouri State University; Circuit Judge Marshall Craig; and B. G. Ramsey, professor of history, SeMo State. About 40 people attended the forum on the topic, "Who Owns the land."

Private owners under 'increasing pressure'

Private ownership of the land is a compartively recent development in history, and private ownership is coming under increasing pressure as the country's population grows.

That was the message heard by about 40 people who attended a human issues forum Tuesday night in the Security Federal Savings & Loan Association community room.

Speakers were Circuit Judge Marshall Craig and Dr. B. G. Ramsey, professor of history at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. The moderator was Dr. Charles Bonwell, associate professor of history at SeMo State.

Ramsey told the group that until the time of the American Revolution, all land was owned by the king. The Americans, especially the middle-class farmer, challenged this concept.

Out of the revolution and the presence of abundant land, Americans developed a belief in private ownership of property.

The government, however, still used land to further national policy, such as giving land for the railroads and for homesteading.

The giving away of all the land began slowing down near the beginning of the 20th Century when the government began creating public parks and taking back some of the land given to the railroads.

The questions today, Ramsey said, are to what degree government can take away an individuals land to implement planning and what is the resonsibility of individuals to a community when using the land?

Craig said most people believe that we can do with our land as we please. For the most part, that is true , he said. However, zoning laws restrict our land use, he added.

A person can lose his land through condemnation a right given to government in the Constitution. Governments can condemn land when they can show the need and necessity to do so and can pay the fair avalue of the land.

Railroads and utilities can also condemn for right-a-way, although only for easements or right of way.

When the government has the right to take property, Judge Craig said the people have to watch their rights closely.

A person has the right to

The exterior will be concrete masonry. Acoustical ceiling will be installed and carpeting will also be used to control noise.

The study area will provide tables and chairs to seat about 50 to 60 students.

Money for construction will come from a bond issue passed two years ago.

A school calendar for the 1976-77 school year was also approved Monday night by the board.

Teachers' orientation will be held Aug. 23, teachers' workshop Aug. 24, and student registration and orientation Aug. 25--the first day of school for students.

No school will be held Sept. 6, Labor Day.

Last day of school will be May 27, when commencement exercises will be held.

ENERGY VS. POLLUTION

A continuing dilemma that faces the United States — as well as other industrial societies for that matter — is the choice between energy and poliution. Although some forms of energy are less damaging to the environment than others, the most productive types — including coal, oil and nuclear — all have environmental consequences that are far from ideal.

Lurking in the background for the U.S. is the fact that our mammoth energy needs are in good measure supplied from abroad — and our independence is compromised to that degree.

"When the Arab oil embargo was imposed two and a half years ago and it became apparent we had an energy crisis," Utah's Senator Jake Garn said recently from his office, "we were 17 percent dependent on outside sources of oil. Now, because of government controls on domestically produced petroleum, we are 40 percent dependent. If the Arabs decided to impose another embargo, it would cause economic chaos in this country; they could ask most any price for their oil and we would be powerless to do anything about it."

Given this situation, logic dictates that the nation simply must bite the environmental bullet and get on with the task of producing new sources of energy. A worse environment is not a happy choice — yet it is a far better one than trusting our future to world conditions far beyond our power to control.

Standing between this reality and greater energy independence for America, however, are some environmentalist groups which have effectively tied the nation's hands on a variety of energy projects. Notably, the proposed $3.5 billion Kaiparowits coal-burning power plant in southern Utah appears all but doomed because of objections over what it might do to the air in the region. Scratch 3,000 megawatts of electricity.

The federal government, for its part, has done next to nothing to get this country on the road toward true energy independence. The lack of a comprehensive program to that end continues to astound most observers.

Unless this situation is altered soon, it appears that the country is indeed headed for the day when — in the recent words of House Republican John Rhodes of Arizona — we inhabit "a world in which the unemployed live in drafty caves."

SPRAY AWAY IN SAFETY

The controversy over the possible harmful effects of fluorocarbons may be on the way to resolving itself even before all the evidence is in.

In the face of falling sales of spray can products, as well as in answer to the health threat, many manufacturers are developing substitute propellants in place of fluorocarbons, which are suspected of eroding the earth's protective layer of ozone. Some are using compressed air. Others, like Johnson Wax Co., which phased out fluorocarbons in all its spray can products in mid-1975, are using either harmless carbon dioxide or liquid hydrocarbons.

In any event, an estimated half of all aerosol products now sold in the United States do not contain fluorocarbons.

As an alternative to aerosols entirely, another company, Bristol-Myers, has just introduced a new pump-type mechanism in its Ban Basic line of deodorants. Once almost the exclusive province of window cleaners and insecticides, pumps have become more sophisticated in design, making them usable in such products as antiperspirants and hair sprays, where a dripless, finely atomized spray is desired.

Another environmentally beneficial aspect of its pump, says Bristol - Myers, is that after the container is empty, instead of being thrown away, it can be rinsed out and filled with water for other purposes, such as misting house plants.

TV DISTORTIONS

Those "factual" dramas on television often aren't the truth but are distorted to provide a leftist message.

That's the conclusion of Accuracy in Media, a private organization based in New York that keeps a watchful eye on the communications media.

The American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) this year demonstrated television's propensity to favor the dramatic over the accurate in its phony recreation of the clash between President Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

ABC contended in the drama that MacArthur tried to upstage Truman at the time of their historic confrontation on Wake Island. According to the network version, MacArthur attempted to delay his landing until after the President's plane had landed. The drama showed Truman ordering the general to land first. But even after the order, MacArthur allegedly kept the President waiting.

The TV story apparently was based on a discredited book published by Merle Miller, AIM says. The Miller version of the meeting at Wake was denounced as false when the book was first published. Journalists and others who were present at the meeting say the Miller version is not accurate.

But ABC denied to use the debunked version of the incident. A stage production "Give 'em Hell, Harry," also distorts the meeting between Truman and MacArthur.

There are many other examples of how television distorts the truth. The National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) aired "The Deadly Tower," a re-enactment of a 1968 incident at the University of Texas. The young man mounted the tower of the university campus and shot 48 people, killing 16 of them. His deadly spree was brought to a halt by two Austin city policemen, who managed to get to the top of the tower and shoot Whitman.

One of the policemen was Ramior Martinez. NBC falsely portrayed Martinez as a member of the police force who had been passed over twice for promotion. Martinez says "This business of being passed over for promotion is just a lot of malarkey." NBC had implied that the Austin police force was discriminating against Martinez because of his race.

The phony NBC message was clear. The Austin police was discriminating against Mexican-Americans, and Martinez had put these racists in their place by performing a deed of heroism on his day off.

The truth is that although the television drama showed Martinez as the policeman who killed the sniper, it was another policeman armed with a shotgun that fired the fatal shot.

NBC evidently wanted to push a "message" in its drama and it wasn't going to let the facts get in the way.

NBC also distorted the truth in its production called "Guilty or Innocent: The Sam Sheppard Murder Case." The film was slanted all toward Sam Sheppard. Bill Barrett of the Cleveland Press said: "Spare us more of those "factually based dramas." It is apparently impossible to draw drama from truth on TV, and what comes out is a vicious lie like the Sam Sheppard movie—which is regarded forever in Abilene and Sioux City, you can bet, as gospel."

The Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) inaccurately portrayed the facts involving a libel suit brought by John Henry Faoulk, a radio performer, against Aware, a publication that had linked Faulk to a number of communist-front groups and allegedly caused him to be blacklisted in the broadcasting industry.

Television also has distorted much of the recent programs about exposure of communist infiltration in the entertainment industry in the 1940s and 1950s.

Last fall a play titled "Are You Now or Have You Ever Been?" played for several weeks at Ford's Theater in Washington, D.C. The propaganda object was the same as the CBS production. "Fear on Trial." Both were designed to make the American public feel ashamed for the way people were treated who were accused of being communists or communist sympathizers.

Ultra-liberal newscaster Tom Snyder of NBC also is propagandizing almost every night on the NBC Tomorrow show for leftist and liberal causes. At the same time he poses as an objective newsman for NBC, which of course is a huge joke.

Snyder's liberal and leftist bias is obvious to everyone. He also has joined the liberal pack in trying to make it appear that the Rosenbergs were innocent of the crimes for which they were convicted.

Network television news shows also have degenerated into vehicles for liberal causes. Many network newscasters, who several years ago were prohibited from injecting opinion into their news reports, now regularly load their reports with biased comments, always aiding leftist and liberal causes. There are still some honest network news reporters. But they have become the exception rather than the rule. When was the last time you heard a regular network television news reporter utter a conservative or patriotic comment on the air?

Through "factually based" dramas, television networks have been rewriting history to serve liberal propaganda causes.

A new generation of television viewers who have watched recent "factually based" dramas about events a few decades ago have a much different, and high distorted, perception of the truth.

That is true not just of the people who live in Abilene, Sioux City, Columbia and Jefferson City, but also those who live in St. Louis, Kansas City, Washington, D.C. and New York City.—Jefferson City (Mo.) News Tribune

POISONING PEOPLE'S CAPITALISM

After World War II, the expression "people's capitalism" was frequently used to describe the fundamental nature of the American system--a system in which a great "middle class" of American citizens provided the investment dollars to build the backbone of U.S. productivity. These average Americans became a major source of the investment capital that developed new industries, expanded old ones and contributed to a steadily rising standard of living. Millions of people came to own bonds and shares of stock in the oil industry, the utility industry, the transportation industry, and all the other enterprises that provide the employment, products and services that make the United States what it is today.

Not long ago, Mr. Robert Sobel, writing in a dispatch of the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post Service, discussed how the decline in the stock market of the last year or so affects 31 million Americans--and how ultimately the country will be affected. He observed: "Twenty years ago the talk at cocktail parties was of dividends and 'sound common stocks.' Ten years later one heard much of new issues, growth situations and developing technologies, of small companies started by MIT professors in garages, that would be 'tomorrow's IBM.' Nowadays the talk is of gold...commercial paper, certificates of deposit, jewelry and art as investments, and Swiss bank accounts. There is hardly a word about stocks--even as dividend payers."

In other words, the backbone of the capital formation process--the great body of middle class Americans has been discouraged by the mismanagement of the nation's economy--endless attacks on business, on profits and the ever-increasing inroads of the tax collector on such things as capital gains. The emphasis today, as Mr. Sobel observes, is not on investing in tomorrow's opportunity, but in hedging against today's inflation. There must be a rejuvenation of investor confidence, or we will all face a desolate future.

PUBLIC SUPPORT IS DOUBTFUL

There are two reasons for skepticism with regard to public support for a compulsory federal health care system. These reasons were touched upon by Dr. Russell B. Roth, immediate past president of the American Medical Association, in testimony before a congressional committee. He called attention to the fact that a Louis Harris survey has shown that: "concern for medical care rated 15th on the priority list, while inflation ranked first. That raises a final question. Does the public really, genuinely, want Congress to aggravate its principal concern--inflation--in order to treat the 15th ranking problem--health?"

With taxes and inflation steadily eroding the purchasing power of the dollar and the standard of living of most Americans, it is not surprising to find considerable doubt as to the need or the wisdom of creating a whole new federal bureaucracy in the medical care field. Most people should realize by now that there is no such thing as free health care. The only question is finding the most equitable manner of paying for it. In emphasizing the advantages of the AMA-sponsored proposal before Congress known as Medicredit, Dr. Roth said it should "minimize the number of dollars making a round trip to Washington as tax to return as a shrunken benefit." Medicredit would also stress the principle of voluntarism and permit beneficiaries who pay part or all of their health insurance premiums to private companies to use tax credits to offset a part of their payments.

The Medicredit program would do what common sense indicates the public wants most--improve the existing health care system at minimum cost and on a voluntary basis. Above all, it recognizes that the public is, at best in this time of ravaging inflation, lukewarm to the creation of a federal health care system accompanied by a crushing tax burden. Judging by the Harris survey, most people know the real crisis today is not in health care but in the government's inability to manage its financial affairs.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Strom's Army Medals
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C., as heroic a retired major general as ever fought for more appropriations for the Army, was decorated with a Legion of Merit that not only was illegal but was awarded after intense political pressure.

The Army Awards Board "recommended that the award not be approved." And General William Westmoreland, then the Army chief, first refused to sanction the award, but finally was pressured into going along with it.

This award, the second-highest that the Army can pin on a noncombatant's chest, has been granted Thurmond not once but twice. The first was awarded for noncombat duty in World War II. The second stirred up a controversy in the Pentagon that has been hushed up for more than four years.

The law specifies that the award must be presented no more than two years after the meritorious service was performed. In Thurmond's case, he got the award for his overall active reserve service, which the citation said covered the span from January 1946 to December 1964.

The problem is that this Legion of Merit wasn't bestowed upon Thurmond until March 29, 1972-- more than nine years after his meritorious service ended and seven years after the statute of limitations had run.

Even more embarrassing, the Army made an effort to cover up some of the huge time lapse by saying his service ran until 1964, when in fact he retired Jan. 1, 1963.

The successful effort to give Thurmond his illegal Legion of Merit began after an earlier legal attempt during the tenure of Defense Secretary Robert McNamara in the '60s.

Although McNamara denies he personally killed Thurmond's Legion of Merit, it was nevertheless pigeonholed until 1971 when the Nixon Administration sought to revive it.

At that time, General Westmoreland told us, he and then-Army Secretary Stanley Resor talked quietly about the award and "we felt collectively it wasn't justified."

But when Robert Froehlke became Army Secretary in mid-1971, Westmoreland recalled, the Army was put under "quite a bit of congressional pressure" and other heat that "must have come from the White House."

Finally, at a face-to-face meeting, Westmoreland said he told Froehlke, "If you want to give it to Thurmond, I'm not going to try to veto it. But it's got to be a political decision."

As it turned out, Westmoreland declared, "I can tell you categorically it was a political decision," and a "rather irregular one." The award was presented with discreet lack of fanfare by Froehlke who told us he could recall nothing of the background.

On the scale of values upon which leaders are usually judged, Thurmond may appear to be overrated by his admirers in the Pentagon. This does not necessarily mean, however, that he is undeserving of the homage he receives from the Army.

At appropriations time, he always "battles for the Army budget with all the gusto of General George Patton in pursuit of Germans. Thurmond also commanded the Bay Window Brigade, as the Army's Capitol Hill reserve unit was irreverently known. He led many an expeditionary force of pot-bellied legislator-soldiers to assess the military situation in Paris, Rome, Madrid, Hong Kong, Tokyo and other glamorous places.

By using his influence with the Pentagon to locate military installations throughout his home state, Old Strom has also made South Carolina probably the best-defended state in the Union. This has endeared him to local businessmen who have benefited from the Pentagon's beneficence and to the manufacturers of U.S. armaments.

In many ways, Thurmond is the biggest thing to happen to South Carolina since Mad Dog Ruffin yanked the lanyard that sent the first cannon shot of the Civil War arching across Charleston harbor toward Fort Sumter.

At age 73, Strom is living evidence that some old soldiers neither die nor fade away. He still marches through the corridors of Congress, straight as a ramrod, in military cadence, as if leading an invisible parade. Almost everyone agrees he is a model of an antique major general.

Although he became too old for combat and gave up his status in the active reserves 13 years ago, he has remained all-too active in the Reserve Officers Association, which also gave him its highest award, the Minuteman of the Year award, in 1971. Indeed, sources privy to Pentagon politics say that Thurmond really runs the ROA and hand-picked its latest chief, Maj. Gen. J. Milnor Roberts.

Some say Thurmond and Roberts would also like to run the Pentagon. Not long ago, they jointly called upon Maj. Gen. R. G. Gard, the Army personnel chief, to promote Col. Warren Abernathy to brigadier general.

Gen. Gard replied that their friend Abernathy's "fine record and capabilities will doubtless qualify him for consideration." But the promotion, he added delicately, would "follow the established procedures."

Yet, Thurmond's magic with the Army still seems to be working. We have learned that the choice for the brigadier general's slot has now been narrowed to four men, one of them Abernathy.

Footnote: After two days of legal debating, the Army issued a one-page statement to us admitting that the "lengthy period of time between (Thurmond's) period of reitrement and the award ... is unusual." The Army also forthrightly admitted the Army Awards Board had turned down the Thurmond medal. But it said that regulations permit such awards if the original recommendations had been "lost." On that basis, said the Army, Secretary Froehlke gave him the Legion of Merit. Thurmond's office insisted that the "initiative" for the award did not originate with him.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Ford's Brownie Points:
Carter-Kennedy-Woodcock Bloc now appears in control of Democratic Party

WASHINGTON – For some of the nation's most influential labor leaders, the Pennsylvania primaries were a tragedy of errors which may well change the country's political alliances and cripple some power blocs for decades.

To tell it like it is, basically President Ford and Ted Kennedy, with an assist from Jimmy Carter, won the Democratic (cq) contests. Labor president George Meany and some of the men around him who reckoned the keystone state in the bag, lost the race.

First, it now looks like a Carter nomination with Scoop Jackson "all wrapped up" – in the words of Robert Strauss, Democratic National Committee (DNC) chairman, and the political pros inside labor, who add Jackson "would be happy to grab second place."

If this is so, traditional, mainstream, national -- headquarters labor, with its awesomely geared, sprawling Committee on Political Education (CIPE), will be politely treated after the election, regardless of who wins. Politely, but coolly.

Neither Jerry Ford nor Jimmy Carter will owe the labor "movement" anything. Mr. Ford already has been told off publicly by Meany, when labor's chief of chiefs said there was absolutely no relationship between him and the White House – which Jerry Ford accepted without stumbling.

As for Carter, the euphoric Georgian today is beholden to the Ted Kennedy braintrust, a replica of the old Jack Kennedy "in- group," and to United Auto Workers president Leonard woodcock, whom George McGovern almost chose as a running - mate in '72.

Few realize how many Kennedy men now surround Carter. There's Jack Kennedy's own speechwriter and biographer, Ted Sorensen, who knocked out a talk or two for Carter, ran some fundraisers and rounded up some old allies of Jack's.

These included former Assistant Atty. Gen. Burke Marshall and former national security officer Mike Forrestal, just to name a few. Also, dapper Bill Vandenheuvel, long -- time friend of the Kennedys and an intimate of Ted's. Vandenheuvel ran Carter's New York state campaign.

Thus, if the Democratic national convention turns into a derby in Madison Square Garden, the big money horses won't be limited to Carter and Hubert Humphrey. If Carter, now expected to sprint in with about a third of the delegates, is stopped, he could hurdle the barriers by throwing his ballots to Ted Kennedy. This wouldn't surprise many DNC topsiders.

There's no longer any doubt that Jimmy Carter, who mocked the top Pennsylvania labor chiefs, is a permanent power in the Democratic party. the Georgian and George Meany have never met. They've only talked once, briefly by phone. Nor do more than a handful of labor men know Carter – and the limited group includes Georgia state labor council president Herbert Mabry, with whom I've talked. This Georgian rarely mixes in national union circles.

Yet when the ALF- CIO's Executive Council gathers in Wahington shortly it will find it difficult indeed to cut off its ongoing alliance with the Democratic party. Meany has promised his people that he'd take any Democrat for President except George Wallace and George McGovern.

But it will be difficult to unleash any anti- Ford tidal wave this fall (if the President is nominated). Carter and his Kennedy- United Auto Workers alliance are just not the powerful building and construction workers' "thing." Nor will some of the AFL-Clo major political forces whip up any enthusian for him. Thus the unstrategic errors of some of Sen. Jackson's parochial advisers made thousands of brownie points for Jerry Ford.

What my colleagues on the regular political beat don't understand is that labor just didn't want to get started in Pennsylvania. It just didn't roll out the COPE machine which bowled over its opponents in '74 and '72.

These newsmen spent much of the day after the primary poll telephoning national union chiefs asking, "What did happen to labor in Pennsylvania?" Nothing. For example, I.W. (Abe) Abel, president of the 1.2 million-member United Steelworkers, wanted to sit this one out. He had little enthusiasm for Jackson because the latter's advisers turned him off.

Abel is for Hubert Humphrey. Furthermore everybody knows it. So are the heads of the neutral AFL-CIO central bodies such as Philadelphia's labor council chief Ed Toohey. He threw a press conference, endorsed Jackson, and then said loudly he preferred Humphrey.

Abel has his own headaches. His giant union is split wide open over the onrushing race by the fierce infighting among those who want to succeed him when he goes into mandatory retirement in '77.

Further, Jackson did the strangest thing. He got into a diversionary battle with Vice President Rockefeller, the hard hats' hero. In the end it took personal phone calls by Many and Humphrey to Abel and others, it's reported, to get the Pennsylvania labor chiefs campaigning for Jackson and even to send out a measly 150,000 leaflets in the final days.

Labor's defection was signaled when it permitted Jackson to cut his budget from $525,000 to $225,000. This is peanuts to the COPE people but they didn't shell out.

So the Carter-Kennedy-Woodcock coalition romped in. And Ford too.

TV DISTORTIONS

Those "factual" dramas on television often aren't the truth but are distorted to provide a leftist message.

That's the conclusion of Accuracy in Media, a private organization based in New York that keeps a watchful eye on the communications media.

The American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) this year demonstrated television's propensity to favor the dramatic over the accurate in its phony recreation of the clash between President Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

ABC contended in the drama that MacArthur tried to upstage Truman at the time of their historic confrontation on Wake Island. According to the network version, MacArthur attempted to delay his landing until after the President's plane had landed. The drama showed Truman ordering the general to land first. But even after the order, MacArthur allegedly kept the President waiting.

The TV story apparently was based on a discredited book published by Merle Miller, AIM says. The Miller version of the meeting at Wake was denounced as false when the book was first published. Journalists and others who were present at the meeting say the Miller version is not accurate.

But ABC denied to use the debunked version of the incident. A stage production "Give 'em Hell, Harry," also distorts the meeting between Truman and MacArthur.

There are many other examples of how television distorts the truth. The National Broadcasting Co. (NBC) aired "The Deadly Tower," a re-enactment of a 1968 incident at the University of Texas. The young man mounted the tower of the university campus and shot 48 people, killing 16 of them. His deadly spree was brought to a halt by two Austin city policemen, who managed to get to the top of the tower and shoot Whitman.

One of the policemen was Ramior Martinez. NBC falsely portrayed Martinez as a member of the police force who had been passed over twice for promotion. Martinez says "This business of being passed over for promotion is just a lot of malarkey." NBC had implied that the Austin police force was discriminating against Martinez because of his race.

The phony NBC message was clear. The Austin police was discriminating against Mexican-Americans, and Martinez had put these racists in their place by performing a deed of heroism on his day off.

The truth is that although the television drama showed Martinez as the policeman who killed the sniper, it was another policeman armed with a shotgun that fired the fatal shot.

NBC evidently wanted to push a "message" in its drama and it wasn't going to let the facts get in the way.

NBC also distorted the truth in its production called "Guilty or Innocent: The Sam Sheppard Murder Case." The film was slanted all toward Sam Sheppard. Bill Barrett of the Cleveland Press said: "Spare us more of those "factually based dramas." It is apparently impossible to draw drama from truth on TV, and what comes out is a vicious lie like the Sam Sheppard movie—which is regarded forever in Abilene and Sioux City, you can bet, as gospel."

The Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) inaccurately portrayed the facts involving a libel suit brought by John Henry Faoulk, a radio performer, against Aware, a publication that had linked Faulk to a number of communist-front groups and allegedly caused him to be blacklisted in the broadcasting industry.

Television also has distorted much of the recent programs about exposure of communist infiltration in the entertainment industry in the 1940s and 1950s.

Last fall a play titled "Are You Now or Have You Ever Been?" played for several weeks at Ford's Theater in Washington, D.C. The propaganda object was the same as the CBS production "Fear on Trial." Both were designed to make the American public feel ashamed for the way people were treated who were accused of being communists or communist sympathizers.

Ultra-liberal newscaster Tom Snyder of NBC also is propagandizing almost every night on the NBC Tomorrow show for leftist and liberal causes. At the same time he poses as an objective newsman for NBC, which of course is a huge joke.

Snyder's liberal and leftist bias is obvious to everyone. He also has joined the liberal pack in trying to make it appear that the Rosenbergs were innocent of the crimes for which they were convicted.

Network television news shows also have degenerated into vehicles for liberal causes. Many network newscasters, who several years ago were prohibited from injecting opinion into their news reports, now regularly load their reports with biased comments, always aiding leftist and liberal causes. There are still some honest network news reporters. But they have become the exception rather than the rule. When was the last time you heard a regular network television news reporter utter a conservative or patriotic comment on the air?

Through "factually based" dramas, television networks have been rewriting history to serve liberal propaganda causes.

A new generation of television viewers who have watched recent "factually based" dramas about events a few decades ago have a much different, and high distorted, perception of the truth.

That is true not just of the people who live in Abilene, Sioux City, Columbia and Jefferson City, but also those who live in St. Louis, Kansas City, Washington, D.C. and New York City.—Jefferson City (Mo.) News Tribune

POISONING PEOPLE'S CAPITALISM

After World War II, the expression "people's capitalism" was frequently used to describe the fundamental nature of the American system--a system in which a great "middle class" of American citizens provided the investment dollars to build the backbone of U.S. productivity. These average Americans became a major source of the investment capital that developed new industries, expanded old ones and contributed to a steadily rising standard of living. Millions of people came to own bonds and shares of stock in the oil industry, the utility industry, the transportation industry, and all the other enterprises that provide the employment, products and services that make the United States what it is today.

Not long ago, Mr. Robert Sobel, writing in a dispatch of the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post Service, discussed how the decline in the stock market of the last year or so affects 31 million Americans--and how ultimately the country will be affected. He observed: "Twenty years ago the talk at cocktail parties was of dividends and 'sound common stocks.' Ten years later one heard much of new issues, growth situations and developing technologies, of small companies started by MIT professors in garages, that would be 'tomorrow's IBM.' Nowadays the talk is of gold...commercial paper, certificates of deposit, jewelry and art as investments, and Swiss bank accounts. There is hardly a word about stocks--even as dividend payers."

In other words, the backbone of the capital formation process--the great body of middle class Americans has been discouraged by the mismanagement of the nation's economy--endless attacks on business, on profits and the ever-increasing inroads of the tax collector on such things as capital gains. The emphasis today, as Mr. Sobel observes, is not on investing in tomorrow's opportunity, but in hedging against today's inflation. There must be a rejuvenation of investor confidence, or we will all face a desolate future.

PUBLIC SUPPORT IS DOUBTFUL

There are two reasons for skepticism with regard to public support for a compulsory federal health care system. These reasons were touched upon by Dr. Russell B. Roth, immediate past president of the American Medical Association, in testimony before a congressional committee. He called attention to the fact that a Louis Harris survey has shown that: "concern for medical care rated 15th on the priority list, while inflation ranked first. That raises a final question. Does the public really, genuinely, want Congress to aggravate its principal concern--inflation--in order to treat the 15th ranking problem--health?"

With taxes and inflation steadily eroding the purchasing power of the dollar and the standard of living of most Americans, it is not surprising to find considerable doubt as to the need or the wisdom of creating a whole new federal bureaucracy in the medical care field. Most people should realize by now that there is no such thing as free health care. The only question is finding the most equitable manner of paying for it. In emphasizing the advantages of the AMA-sponsored proposal before Congress known as Medicredit, Dr. Roth said it should "minimize the number of dollars making a round trip to Washington as tax to return as a shrunken benefit." Medicredit would also stress the principle of voluntarism and permit beneficiaries who pay part or all of their health insurance premiums to private companies to use tax credits to offset a part of their payments.

The Medicredit program would do what common sense indicates the public wants most--improve the existing health care system at minimum cost and on a voluntary basis. Above all, it recognizes that the public is, at best in this time of ravaging inflation, lukewarm to the creation of a federal health care system accompanied by a crushing tax burden. Judging by the Harris survey, most people know the real crisis today is not in health care but in the government's inability to manage its financial affairs.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Strom's Army Medals
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.-S.C., as heroic a retired major general as ever fought for more appropriations for the Army, was decorated with a Legion of Merit that not only was illegal but was awarded after intense political pressure.

The Army Awards Board "recommended that the award not be approved." And General William Westmoreland, then the Army chief, first refused to sanction the award, but finally was pressured into going along with it.

This award, the second-highest that the Army can pin on a noncombatant's chest, has been granted Thurmond not once but twice. The first was awarded for noncombat duty in World War II. The second stirred up a controversy in the Pentagon that has been hushed up for more than four years.

The law specifies that the award must be presented no more than two years after the meritorious service was performed. In Thurmond's case, he got the award for his overall active reserve service, which the citation said covered the span from January 1946 to December 1964.

The problem is that this Legion of Merit wasn't bestowed upon Thurmond until March 29, 1972-- more than nine years after his meritorious service ended and seven years after the statute of limitations had run.

Even more embarrassing, the Army made an effort to cover up some of the huge time lapse by saying his service ran until 1964, when in fact he retired Jan. 1, 1963.

The successful effort to give Thurmond his illegal Legion of Merit began after an earlier legal attempt during the tenure of Defense Secretary Robert McNamara in the '60s.

Although McNamara denies he personally killed Thurmond's Legion of Merit, it was nevertheless pigeonholed until 1971 when the Nixon Administration sought to revive it.

At that time, General Westmoreland told us, he and then-Army Secretary Stanley Resor talked quietly about the award and "we felt collectively it wasn't justified."

But when Robert Froehlke became Army Secretary in mid-1971, Westmoreland recalled, the Army was put under "quite a bit of congressional pressure" and other heat that "must have come from the White House."

Finally, at a face-to-face meeting, Westmoreland said he told Froehlke, "If you want to give it to Thurmond, I'm not going to try to veto it. But it's got to be a political decision."

As it turned out, Westmoreland declared, "I can tell you categorically it was a political decision," and a "rather irregular one." The award was presented with discreet lack of fanfare by Froehlke who told us he could recall nothing of the background.

On the scale of values upon which leaders are usually judged, Thurmond may appear to be overrated by his admirers in the Pentagon. This does not necessarily mean, however, that he is undeserving of the homage he receives from the Army.

At appropriations time, he always "battles for the Army budget with all the gusto of General George Patton in pursuit of Germans. Thurmond also commanded the Bay Window Brigade, as the Army's Capitol Hill reserve unit was irreverently known. He led many an expeditionary force of pot-bellied legislator-soldiers to assess the military situation in Paris, Rome, Madrid, Hong Kong, Tokyo and other glamorous places.

By using his influence with the Pentagon to locate military installations throughout his home state, Old Strom has also made South Carolina probably the best-defended state in the Union. This has endeared him to local businessmen who have benefited from the Pentagon's beneficence and to the manufacturers of U.S. armaments.

In many ways, Thurmond is the biggest thing to happen to South Carolina since Mad Dog Ruffin yanked the lanyard that sent the first cannon shot of the Civil War arching across Charleston harbor toward Fort Sumter.

At age 73, Strom is living evidence that some old soldiers neither die nor fade away. He still marches through the corridors of Congress, straight as a ramrod, in military cadence, as if leading an invisible parade. Almost everyone agrees he is a model of an antique major general.

Although he became too old for combat and gave up his status in the active reserves 13 years ago, he has remained all-too active in the Reserve Officers Association, which also gave him its highest award, the Minuteman of the Year award, in 1971. Indeed, sources privy to Pentagon politics say that Thurmond really runs the ROA and hand-picked its latest chief, Maj. Gen. J. Milnor Roberts.

Some say Thurmond and Roberts would also like to run the Pentagon. Not long ago, they jointly called upon Maj. Gen. R. G. Gard, the Army personnel chief, to promote Col. Warren Abernathy to brigadier general.

Gen. Gard replied that their friend Abernathy's "fine record and capabilities will doubtless qualify him for consideration." But the promotion, he added delicately, would "follow the established procedures."

Yet, Thurmond's magic with the Army still seems to be working. We have learned that the choice for the brigadier general's slot has now been narrowed to four men, one of them Abernathy.

Footnote: After two days of legal debating, the Army issued a one-page statement to us admitting that the "lengthy period of time between (Thurmond's) period of reitrement and the award ... is unusual." The Army also forthrightly admitted the Army Awards Board had turned down the Thurmond medal. But it said that regulations permit such awards if the original recommendations had been "lost." On that basis, said the Army, Secretary Froehlke gave him the Legion of Merit. Thurmond's office insisted that the "initiative" for the award did not originate with him.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Ford's Brownie Points:
Carter-Kennedy-Woodcock Bloc now appears in control of Democratic Party

WASHINGTON – For some of the nation's most influential labor leaders, the Pennsylvania primaries were a tragedy of errors which may well change the country's political alliances and cripple some power blocs for decades.

To tell it like it is, basically President Ford and Ted Kennedy, with an assist from Jimmy Carter, won the Democratic (cq) contests. Labor president George Meany and some of the men around him who reckoned the keystone state in the bag, lost the race.

First, it now looks like a Carter nomination with Scoop Jackson "all wrapped up" – in the words of Robert Strauss, Democratic National Committee (DNC) chairman, and the political pros inside labor, who add Jackson "would be happy to grab second place."

If this is so, traditional, mainstream, national -- headquarters labor, with its awesomely geared, sprawling Committee on Political Education (CIPE), will be politely treated after the election, regardless of who wins. Politely, but coolly.

Neither Jerry Ford nor Jimmy Carter will owe the labor "movement" anything. Mr. Ford already has been told off publicly by Meany, when labor's chief of chiefs said there was absolutely no relationship between him and the White House – which Jerry Ford accepted without stumbling.

As for Carter, the euphoric Georgian today is beholden to the Ted Kennedy braintrust, a replica of the old Jack Kennedy "in- group," and to United Auto Workers president Leonard woodcock, whom George McGovern almost chose as a running - mate in '72.

Few realize how many Kennedy men now surround Carter. There's Jack Kennedy's own speechwriter and biographer, Ted Sorensen, who knocked out a talk or two for Carter, ran some fundraisers and rounded up some old allies of Jack's.

These included former Assistant Atty. Gen. Burke Marshall and former national security officer Mike Forrestal, just to name a few. Also, dapper Bill Vandenheuvel, long -- time friend of the Kennedys and an intimate of Ted's. Vandenheuvel ran Carter's New York state campaign.

Thus, if the Democratic national convention turns into a derby in Madison Square Garden, the big money horses won't be limited to Carter and Hubert Humphrey. If Carter, now expected to sprint in with about a third of the delegates, is stopped, he could hurdle the barriers by throwing his ballots to Ted Kennedy. This wouldn't surprise many DNC topsiders.

There's no longer any doubt that Jimmy Carter, who mocked the top Pennsylvania labor chiefs, is a permanent power in the Democratic party. the Georgian and George Meany have never met. They've only talked once, briefly by phone. Nor do more than a handful of labor men know Carter – and the limited group includes Georgia state labor council president Herbert Mabry, with whom I've talked. This Georgian rarely mixes in national union circles.

Yet when the ALF- CIO's Executive Council gathers in Wahington shortly it will find it difficult indeed to cut off its ongoing alliance with the Democratic party. Meany has promised his people that he'd take any Democrat for President except George Wallace and George McGovern.

But it will be difficult to unleash any anti- Ford tidal wave this fall (if the President is nominated). Carter and his Kennedy- United Auto Workers alliance are just not the powerful building and construction workers' "thing." Nor will some of the AFL-CIo major political forces whip up any enthusian for him. Thus the unstrategic efrors of some of Sen. Jackson's parochial advisers made thousands of brownie points for Jerry Ford.

What my colleagues on the regular political beat don't understand is that labor just didn't want to get started in Pennsylvania. It just didn't roll out the COPE machine which bowled over its opponents in '74 and '72.

These newsmen spent much of the day after the primary poll telephoning national union chiefs asking, "What did happen to labor in Pennsylvania?" Nothing. For example, I.W. (Abe) Abel, president of the 1.2 million-member United Steelworkers, wanted to sit this one out. He had little enthusiasm for Jackson because the latter's advisers turned him off.

Abel is for Hubert Humphrey. Furthermore everybody knows it. So are the heads of the neutral AFL-CIO central bodies such as Philadelphia's labor council chief Ed Toohey. He threw a press conference, endorsed Jackson, and then said loudly he preferred Humphrey.

Abel has his own headaches. His giant union is split wide open over the onrushing race by the fierce infighting among those who want to succeed him when he goes into mandatory retirement in '77.

Further, Jackson did the strangest thing. He got into a diversionary battle with Vice President Rockefeller, the hard hats' hero. In the end it took personal phone calls by Many and Humphrey to Abel and others, it's reported, to get the Pennsylvania labor chiefs campaigning for Jackson and even to send out a measly 150,000 leaflets in the final days.

Labor's defection was signaled when it permitted Jackson to cut his budget from $525,000 to $225,000. This is peanuts to the COPE people but they didn't shell out.

So the Carter-Kennedy-Woodcock coalition romped in. And Ford too.

Chicken with brandy

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Time was when chicken was served on Sunday as a special family treat after a weeklong parade of beef, pork and lamb. Today, chicken is about the lowest priced meat on the market, thanks largely to increased efficiency in poultry raising.

As a result, Americans now consume some 12 billion pounds of poultry a year, or roughly 60 pounds per person. Another reason for the bird's soaring popularity is the ever growing number of imaginative recipes. Down on the farm, I doubt whether they would have thought of basting roast chicken in cognac. But such formulas today are not uncommon.

Some housewives complain that chicken today doesn't have the taste it once did. In fact, the breeders' practice of feeding the birds with supplements to fatten them to market size and weight in a mere eight weeks has probably been done at some cost to the taste.

But there are ways of enhancing the flavor of chicken, and giving it a new taste dimension. One is the use of fruit-flavored brandy in cooking the bird and another is the judicious addition of herbs and spices.

Then, too, there are forms of poultry that still abound in flavor. One is the stewing fowl, the broad-breasted hen that is close to a year old and which has to be relegated to the stewpot to make it tender.

Another flavorful bird is the Rock Cornish hen, which is obtained by crossbreeding Cornish and Plymouth Rock fowls. These succulent birds rarely weigh more than a pound and are usually roasted and served in individual portions.

I recently dined on Rock Cornish hen which had been seasoned with and basted in orange-flavored cognac and laced with several pungent herbs. It was a gourmet treat. Here is the recipe.

4 fresh Rock Cornish hens
1 loaf raisin bread
2 tablespoons finely chipped pine nuts
¾ pound of butter (3 sticks)
¾ cup orange-flavored cognac
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
Mace
Ginger
Rosemary
Sage
1 whole clove garlic, peeled
½ cup chicken consomme
2 tablespoons apricot liqueur
½ cup heavy cream

Soak bread and nuts in orange-flavored cognac till bread is of proper stuffing consistency but not mushy. Rub each hen cavity with salt, pepper, mace, ginger, rosemary and sage and a half stick of butter. Stuff hens with bread and nut mixture, reserving as much of orange-cognac as possible. In deep baking pan place remaining butter, broken into chunks, garlic, consomme, orange-cognac liquid and apricot liqueur. Place hens in pan, put in preheated 400-degree oven and roast about 1 hour. Baste often with pan liquid, adding more consomme, if liquid dries out. During last 15 minutes, pour cream over hens and continue basting. Serve whole bird per person, spooning remaining pan sauce over hens. Serves 4. Good with chilled dry white wine.

School teaches drivers to foil kidnap attempts

By YVONNE de JONG

OSOGNA, Switzerland (AP) — The casual passerby will feel tempted to call the police when he spots the Rolls Royce zigzagging at high speed on a remote private road.

But he does not need to worry. It's elementary routine in a new school, believed to be unique in Europe. The student drivers are taught how to foil kidnap attempts by a perfect motorized getaway.

Unnus Hendrichs, a muscled Dutchman and ex-rally driver who has been giving special performance driving lessons in this tiny Ticino village for the past six years, initiated the project when the number of kidnapings in neighboring Italy rose to an alltime high of 58 last year.

Bodyguards and drivers of money transports, of millionaire industrialists and other potential kidnap victims learn some hair-raising basics, including turning on a dime in a controlled 180 degree slide.

Candidates must pass 18 different tests. "The drivers must be in control of their car in any situation without endangering their bosses' lives. We teach them to escape without the use of firearms. We are for a bloodless solution."

Hendrichs, 36, is not too keen on giving details but he has had many applicants since he first opened his antikidnap school last August. Predictably, Italians make up most of his clients, he says. But he also trains drivers from Germany, France and Switzerland.

"Among the first to be interested were Swiss banks," Hendrichs said with a smile.

Applicants are thoroughly screened before being admitted to the three-days-plus-one-night course comprising two phases on which Hendrichs would not elaborate. "We work four months to prepare the course. Applications must be made by the drivers' bosses. Then I have the applicants checked by a private detective agency.

"These courses are preparations for an emergency," he told a reporter. "They are not fit for youngsters looking for adventure or for elderly people. They are open only to experienced drivers of prominent people in exposed positions. The chauffeur who takes madame to the hairdresser and then acts as her butler would not be in the right place here."

Clients have been exclusively male so far, but the daughter of an unidentified Italian industrialist is expected to be the first woman student.

Polly's Pointers

Try window cleaner on yellowed plastic

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — We all know that manufacturers seem to use as little material as possible in all their creations, but my Pet Peeve is with pajamas that have no pockets. To correct this I make my own by cutting a piece of cloth about four and a half by six inches and stitch this to the under side corner of the right front of my pajamas. I then have a neat pocket for a hanky or facial tissue that is out of sight. —MARY A.

DEAR POLLY — I can tell Kim how to make a doll bed or cradle out of a milk carton. Open the end of the carton and lay out lengthwise. Cut out the top, being careful to keep edges straight. Leave five-eighths inch on each side of each corner and cut a one inch deep piece lengthwise from each side but do not cut ends out. Take the piece first cut from the top of the box and fold it in half evenly. Fold in one-half to five-eighths inch on sides and bottom of open end. Paste one half of the cut top on inside, the other half on the outside to make a double headboard. Cut headboard and footboard to desired shapes perhaps rounded at the top. Use four empty thread spools of the same size or corks for legs. Glue to bed and weight down after gluing as the wax on the carton makes it more difficult for the glue to adhere. I use that all-purpose white glue. To finish, cover with a cotton material pasted on. Do use cotton as rayon and silk sometimes get spotted with glue. I like to fill in the posts with a fold of cardboard and top them with plastic tops from dishwashing liquid bottles. Add bedding and make some little girl really happy. —R.E.D.

Mother afraid she'll hurt her son

Dear Ann Landers: Last night I did something that really frightened me. I was helping our son with his homework and he refused to try to solve the math problem — just kept saying, "I can't get it."

I became so infuriated I started to slap his face as hard as I could and I couldn't stop. Today the little guy has black and blue marks on his cheeks. I was so ashamed I didn't let him go to school.

This is the first time I have been unable to control myself. Usually I scream and make threats but last night I went crazy. I told my husband I am worried about myself. He says I jut have to learn to handle my nasty temper.

I'm scared to death that one of these days I will seriously injure one of the kids. I do love them very much, Ann. Can you help me? -- Wausau, Wis., Mother

Dear Mother: You are not alone. Thousands of parents beat their children, sometimes so severely they die. These parents are emotionally ill.

Make an appointment at once with a counselor at the Marthon County Health Care Center or the Wausau Hospital Outpatient Center on Maple Hill.

Then write to Parents Anonymous National Headquarters for literature that will help you understand the problem. The address is 2930 West Imperial Highway, Suite 332, Inglewood, Cal. 90303.

Dear Ann Landers: Saturday night I had a dinner party in my home for six couples. I love to entertain, and do all my own cooking and baking. I spent two days in the kitchen preparing special dishes.

Three women and one man refused to eat the main course because the were dieting. Six people wouldn't touch the potato casserole. My home-made rolls were ignored by eight guests. Nearly half the people said, "No dessert. I'm trying to lose weight." (My chocolate mousse was fit for a king.) I felt as if I had been slapped in the face.

There isn't a dieter in the world who can't afford to indulge in a few extra calories on occasion. Isn't it rude to accept a dinner invitation, then turn up your nose at the food? I say if people don't want to eat they should stay home. What do you say? -- Plain Mad

Dear P.M.: I agree it's rude to go to a dinner party and not eat. But the hip hostess anticipates dieters and has fresh vegetables and a low-cal dip along with the rich hors d'oeuvres. She serves fruit as well as chocolate mousse. And she doesn't go into a depression when guests pass up her home-made rolls.

Dear Ann Landers: Please, Ann, tell people again about Synanon. We went through the tortures of the damned with our son who was hooked on drugs. Nothing worked. Then we heard about Synanon.

We prevailed upon the judge to parole our son to Synanon as an alternative to a prison sentence.

Now, three years later he is straight, happy, healthy, a beautiful person, and works full-time for Synanon. Please let the world know about this wonderful organization that saved our son's life. -- New Orleans

Dear N.O.: Thanks for reminding me. It's time I mentioned Synanon again. They do a wonderful job. If you can't find it in your phone book, write to the national headquarters for guidance. The address is: Post Office Box 786, Marshall, Cal. 94940.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers's booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Chicken with brandy

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Time was when chicken was served on Sunday as a special family treat after a weeklong parade of beef, pork and lamb. Today, chicken is about the lowest priced meat on the market, thanks largely to increased efficiency in poultry raising.

As a result, Americans now consume some 12 billion pounds of poultry a year, or roughly 60 pounds per person. Another reason for the bird's soaring popularity is the ever growing number of imaginative recipes. Down on the farm, I doubt whether they would have thought of basting roast chicken in cognac. But such formulas today are not uncommon.

Some housewives complain that chicken today doesn't have the taste it once did. In fact, the breeders' practice of feeding the birds with supplements to fatten them to market size and weight in a mere eight weeks has probably been done at some cost to the taste.

But there are ways of enhancing the flavor of chicken, and giving it a new taste dimension. One is the use of fruit-flavored brandy in cooking the bird and another is the judicious addition of herbs and spices.

Then, too, there are forms of poultry that still abound in flavor. One is the stewing fowl, the broad-breasted hen that is close to a year old and which has to be relegated to the stewpot to make it tender.

Another flavorful bird is the Rock Cornish hen, which is obtained by crossbreeding Cornish and Plymouth Rock fowls. These succulent birds rarely weigh more than a pound and are usually roasted and served in individual portions.

I recently dined on Rock Cornish hen which had been seasoned with and basted in orange-flavored cognac and laced with several pungent herbs. It was a gourmet treat. Here is the recipe.

4 fresh Rock Cornish hens
1 loaf raisin bread
2 tablespoons finely chipped pine nuts
¾ pound of butter (3 sticks)
¾ cup orange-flavored cognac
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
Mace
Ginger
Rosemary
Sage
1 whole clove garlic, peeled
½ cup chicken consomme
2 tablespoons apricot liqueur
½ cup heavy cream

Soak bread and nuts in orange-flavored cognac till bread is of proper stuffing consistency but not mushy. Rub each hen cavity with salt, pepper, mace, ginger, rosemary and sage and a half stick of butter. Stuff hens with bread and nut mixture, reserving as much of orange-cognac as possible. In deep baking pan place remaining butter, broken into chunks, garlic, consomme, orange-cognac liquid and apricot liqueur. Place hens in pan, put in preheated 400-degree oven and roast about 1 hour. Baste often with pan liquid, adding more consomme, if liquid dries out. During last 15 minutes, pour cream over hens and continue basting. Serve whole bird per person, spooning remaining pan sauce over hens. Serves 4. Good with chilled dry white wine.

Heat; garnish with pan-fried salami slices.

School teaches drivers to foil kidnap attempts

By YVONNE de JONG

OSOGNA, Switzerland (AP) — The casual passerby will feel tempted to call the police when he spots the Rolls Royce zigzagging at high speed on a remote private road.

But he does not need to worry. It's elementary routine in a new school, believed to be unique in Europe. The student drivers are taught how to foil kidnap attempts by a perfect motorized getaway.

Unnus Hendrichs, a muscled Dutchman and ex-rally driver who has been giving special performance driving lessons in this tiny Ticino village for the past six years, initiated the project when the number of kidnapings in neighboring Italy rose to an alltime high of 58 last year.

Bodyguards and drivers of money transports, of millionaire industrialists and other potential kidnap victims learn some hair-raising basics, including turning on a dime in a controlled 180 degree slide.

Candidates must pass 18 different tests. "The drivers must be in control of their car in any situation without endangering their bosses' lives. We teach them to escape without the use of firearms. We are for a bloodless solution."

Hendrichs, 36, is not too keen on giving details but he has had many applicants since he first opened his antikidnap school last August. Predictably, Italians make up most of his clients, he says. But he also trains drivers from Germany, France and Switzerland.

"Among the first to be interested were Swiss banks," Hendrichs said with a smile.

Applicants are thoroughly screened before being admitted to the three-days-plus-one-night course comprising two phases on which Hendrichs would not elaborate. "We work four months to prepare the course. Applications must be made by the drivers' bosses. Then I have the applicants checked by a private detective agency.

"These courses are preparations for an emergency," he told a reporter. "They are not fit for youngsters looking for adventure or for elderly people. They are open only to experienced drivers of prominent people in exposed positions. The chauffeur who takes madame to the hairdresser and then acts as her butler would not be in the right place here."

Clients have been exclusively male so far, but the daughter of an unidentified Italian industrialist is expected to be the first woman student.

The state bird of Nebraska is the western meadow lark.

Polly's Pointers

Try window cleaner on yellowed plastic

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — We all know that manufacturers seem to use as little material as possible in all their creations, but my Pet Peeve is with pajamas that have no pockets. To correct this I make my own by cutting a piece of cloth about four and a half by six inches and stitch this to the under side corner of the right front of my pajamas. I then have a neat pocket for a hanky or facial tissue that is out of sight. —MARY A.

DEAR POLLY — I can tell Kim how to make a doll bed or cradle out of a milk carton. Open the end of the carton and lay out lengthwise. Cut out the top, being careful to keep edges straight. Leave five-eighths inch on each side of each corner and cut a one inch deep piece lengthwise from each side but do not cut ends out. Take the piece first cut from the top of the box and fold it in half evenly. Fold in one-half to five-eighths inch on sides and bottom of open end. Paste one half of the cut top on inside, the other half on the outside to make a double headboard. Cut headboard and footboard to desired shapes perhaps rounded at the top. Use four empty thread spools of the same size or corks for legs. Glue to bed and weight down after gluing as the wax on the carton makes it more difficult for the glue to adhere. I use that all-purpose white glue. To finish, cover with a cotton materia. pasted on. Do use cotton as rayon and silk sometimes get spotted with glue. I like to fill in the posts with a fold of cardboard and top them with plastic tops from dishwashing liquid bottles. Add bedding and make some little girl really happy. —R.E.D.

Mother afraid she'll hurt her son

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Last night I did something that really frightened me. I was helping our son with his homework and he refused to try to solve the math problem – just kept saying, "I can't get it."

I became so infuriated I started to slap his face as hard as I could and I couldn't stop. Today the little guy has black and blue marks on his cheeks. I was so ashamed I didn't let him go to school.

This is the first time I have been unable to control myself. Usually I scream and make threats but last night I went crazy. I told my husband I am worried about myself. He says I jut have to learn to handle my nasty temper.

I'm scared to death that one of these days I will seriously injure one of the kids. I do love them very much, Ann. Can you help me? -- Wausau, Wis., Mother

Three Sikeston karate enthusiasts picked up four trophies in the Jefferson College Tournament last Saturday at Hillsboro. They are, from left to right, Alan Figley, Clifton Ham, Mark Pool and their coach, Woodrow Speed. Figley earned two of the trophies, first place Green Belt division fighting and second place form. Cards rally to hand Braves eighth straight setback, 8-7

Dave Bristol, in his third stint as a major league manager, this time with the Atlanta Braves, is learning once again that the life of a big-league skipper is not an easy one.

"You die a little bit in games like this," said Bristol after his Braves blew a three-run lead and dropped their eighth consecutive decision, an 8-7 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals in 12 innings Tuesday night. The Braves' current losing streak is the longest the club has gone through since the franchise was moved from Milwaukee to Atlanta a decade ago.

The Braves erupted for six runs in the second inning and led 7-4 after three, but couldn't hold on. they came within one out of victory, but St. Louis tied the score with two out in the ninth and then won it in the 12th on a run-scoring double by Ted Simmons, his fourth hit of the game.

In other National League games, the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Chicago Cubs 9-6, the Philadelphia Phillies blanked the Houston Astros 5-0, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the San Francisco Giants 6-5 and the New York Mets defeated the Cincinnati Reds 5-3. San Diego at Montreal was postponed because of cold weather.

St. Louis reached Atlanta starter Phil Niekro for a pair of runs in each of the first two innings. But the Braves erupted for their biggest inning of the season, scoring six runs in the third, the final three on a homer by off-season acquisition Jim Wynn.

Atlanta added another run in the third on an RBI triple by Darrel Chaney.

Niekro hit Bake McBride with a pitch in the fifth inning and balked him to second. He scored on Simmons' single. A solo homer by Simmons in the eighth made it 7-6, then with two out in the ninth pinch-hitter Mike Anderson doubled and Lou Brock followed with a run-scoring single to tie the score.

McBride, who had homered in the first inning, singled in the 12th and came home with the winning run on Simmons' double.

Dodgers 9, Cubs 6

Los Angeles posted its 10th consecutive victory and took a one-game lead in the NL West by beating the Cubs behind home runs by Henry Cruz and Ron Cey. Burt Hooton got the victory, with relief help from Mike Marshall.

Panthers take advantage of Indian errors

NEW MADRID — The Lilbourn Panthers squeaked by the New Madrid Indians 6-4 here Tuesday afternoon. Jimmy Reed was the winning pitcher although he had to have help in the seventh inning from Sammy Taylor. Dick St. Mary suffered the loss. Reed gave up seven safeties to the Indians while St. Mary held the powerful Panthers to only four hits.

Errors were the biggest problem that the Indian hurler faced as his defense mishandled eight chances.

The Indians took the lead in the bottom of the first inning as Reed displayed wildness and walked the first two batters and Chris Tanner singled in the lone run.

An error in the top of the second opened the gate for the Panthers and before the inning was closed Lilbourn had crossed the plate two times. The runs were scored on a wildpitch and a fielders choice.

After a double by Reno opened the top of the third inning two walks filled the bases and an error by the second basemen let in two more runs and Lilbourn was enjoying a 4-1 advantage.

Ralph Palmer connected with one of Reed's pitches and circled the bases for a homerun in the bottom of the fifth to cut the Panther lead in half but the error prone Indians couldn't get enough defense to stop Lilbourn from adding two more runs with one each in the sixth and seventh as direct results of miscues.

Reed was sailing along with a 6-2 lead going into the homehalf of the seventh inning when a basehit and walk started the trouble that sent him to the showers in favor of Sammy Taylor. With only one out the Indians had scored two runs and were still threatening but Taylor came in and retired the next two batters with two on to put out the fire and preserve the Panther's 16th victory of the season against three losses. New Madrid is 7-3.

Braves walk over Eagles

EAST PRAIRIE — The Scott Central Braves capitalized on fifteen walks from four different East Prairie Eagle hurlers as they picked up only third third victory of the year, a 12-1 rout in a Scott-Mississippi Conference game Tuesday afternoon.

Ivan Johnson got the win for the Braves, going the distance. Johnson fanned two and walked three.

After two innings of scoreless baseball, East Prairie starter Carl Moore couldn't find the plate in the third inning. After three walks in a row, Keith May's infield out produced the first run of the game. Johnson then helped himself with the only hit of the inning, a two-run single that made it 3-0. An error allowed another man to score, and another Scott Central runner crossed the plate on a fielder's choice. The Braves led 5-0.

In the fifth, with Mike Helmes on the mound for East Prairie, the roof fell in again on the Eagles. Helmes walked the first four hitters before coach Dave McMahon brought in Mark Mars. Mars managed to retire one batter, but walked six other hitters. Gary Davidson came on and also walked a batter before getting a double play to end the seven-run inning.

East Prairie scored their only run in the bottom of the fifth on a single, a walk, and an RBI basehit by Mark Mars.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Representatives of the city of Memphis are keeping quiet on reports they are trying to spirit away the St. Louis American Basketball Association team.

Memphis representatives Mike Storen and Wayne Pyeatt and officials of the ABA's Spirits of St. Louis, are to meet in New York Wednesday, the Commercial Appeal reports.

Neither Storen, executive vice president of the Memphis Grizzlies and former ABA commissioner and president of the Memphis Sounds, nor Pyeatt, president of the Memphis Area Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the board of the National Bank of Commerce, would confirm that the meeting would take place in New York. Storen declined to comment.

Hawks outscore

CHARLESTON — The Kelly Hawks edged the Charleston Bluejays 9-7 in a Scott-Mississippi conference game here Tuesday afternoon.

Dave Robert relieved starter Bob McElmurry in the fourth inning and picked up the victory. Danny Farmer took the loss.

Kelly scored first in the top of the second as a walk and single sent home the run after the outfielder let the ball get by him.

Charleston jumped on McElmurry in the bottom of the third inning. Two singles started the inning but two quick outs followed. Before the side could be retired Andy French doubled home a run and Mark Cissell singled in two more.

Farmer held the Hawks in check through the fourth frame but Kenny Hulshof blasted a threerun homer off his neighbors in the top of the fifth to give Kelly a 4-1 lead.

Coach Mitch Haskins of the Bluejays spent nearly as much time on the mound in the sixth inning as his pitchers as the Charleston coach changed hurlers four times in the frame. Farmer ran into trouble as Kelly loaded the bases with one out. Darrell Jones relieved him. Evert Gordon relieved Jones and Jeff McKinley took over for Gordon but Kelly managed to score five runs.

The big hits in the inning were a two-run single by Doug Johnson and a two-run double by Ron Schlosser.

Charleston threatened to take the game back in the bottom of the seventh but a double play snuffed out their rally. An error, hit batter and single loaded the bases with no one out. A run was walked in and Rick Smoot singled in two more before the big defensive play by Kelly.

Nuggest even series with Nets

DENVER (AP) — Denver Nuggets Coach Larry Brown insisted his team "learned a lot of things" after dropping the opening game of its American Basketball Association championship series with the New York Nets.

One of the lessons, obviously, was how to beat the Nets. Denver got its fast-break offense rolling in the scond half and got better inside penetration with the ball to post a 127-121 victory Tuesday night and square the best-of-seven series at 1-1. Game Three will be played Thursday night in New York.

Some remedial work, however, will be necessary on how to stop New York forward Julius "Dr. J." Erving.

Erving, who scored 45 points in the opener, tossed in 48 points Tuesday night. As in the first game, Erving did pretty much what he wanted.

His 25 points in the fourth quarter set a pro basketball playoff-game record for scoring in a period, and his 37 points in the second half likewise set a pro playoff mark.

"The way he's playing now it's incredible," said Denver forward Bobby Jones, who has the unenviable task of defending Erving.

"We've tried to keep him outside, away from the basket," said Jones. "And we have to deny him the ball as much as possible. But it's tough, and he's really shooting well besides."

Erving connected on 15 of 23 two-point field goal attempts, a pair of three-pointers, and 12 of 16 foul shots. He added 14 rebounds, eight assists, three steals and a blocked shot.

But Erving's efforts were in vain as Denver's balanced scoring attack prevailed before an ABA-record crowd of 19,107.

Guard Ralph Simpson, forced to play all but two minutes of the game because of a shortage of backcourt performers, had 25 points. Forwards Jones and David Thompson and center Dan Issel each scored 24.

Jones and Thompson both scored 12 points in the third period as theNuggets surged to a 12-point lead.

After the Nets pulled within two points early in the fourth quarter, Issel hit five quick baskets, helping Denver take a 101-92 edge with 7:27 remaining.

But the Nuggets still had Erving to contend with. A flurry of steals that produced baskets and Erving's three-point goal pulled the Nets within four points with 1:26 left.

The Nets were to get no closer, as Simpson promptly scored on a three-point play and Jones added a field goal for a 126-117 lead.

During the final quarter, the Nuggets hit 67 per cent from the floor and the Nets 61 per cent. Their combined 82 points in the quarter set a pro record for points in a playoff period.

Game Four of the series is scheduled for Saturday night, also in New York. A fifth game will be played in Denver next Tuesday night.

I-SC Rams blast Oran

ORAN — The Illmo-Scott City Rams eliminated the Oran Eagles from the District 12 Class A state tournament here Tuesday afternoon by the score of 13-1 in five innings.

Hard throwing lefthander Gary Springs spun a two-hitter against the Eagles in picking up the victory. Keith Campbell suffered the loss. The victory gave Springs a 6-0 slate on the year.

Campbell came out throwing hard in the top of the first inning but was wild and issued walks to the first two batters which got him into trouble right away. Ray Campbell followed the walks with a ringing double to left scoring one run but the second runner was tagged out trying to get back to third after rounding the bag too far. After a walk loaded the bases again Campbell fanned the next two batters to end the threat.

The Rams kept the pressure on the Eagles in the second inning as a run scored on a fielders choice to give Springs a 2-0 cushion to work with. The Eagles were having their troubles with the zipping fastball of the Ram hurler though and never could mount any kind of threat.

Campbell smacked Springs on his pitching arm in the top of first inning but after some rubbing and pain killer along with ice packs in the later innings the classy lefthander was nearly unhitable.

The only run that the Eagles could muster was a long fly ball to leftcenter by Senciboy that landed smack in the middle of a trash pile which was an automatic homerun.

After two errors helped the Rams score three runs in the third the Rams began to connect on a tiring Keith Campbell in the fourth inning as Steve Heinkebein blasted a long homerun between the left and centerfields with one on.

An error, walk, and two hit batters followed by two singles produced five runs in the top of the fifth to end the game. Oran was unable to score off Springs in the bottom half of the frame. Scott City is 8-5 on the season.

Lions move to District 10 finals

SENATH — Senath-Hornersville advanced to the finals of the District 10 Class A state tournament here Tuesday with a 3-0 victory over the Twin Rivers Royals.

The Royals had upset the first seeded Nellyville Tigers last week. Senath was seeded fourth in the tournament.

Bob Milligan hurled a three hitter and struckout 14 Lions en route to the victory. Nick McBroom suffered the loss but allowed only five safeties.

The game was a three up and three down affair until the bottom of the fourth inning when Senath took advantage of a lapse in the Royals defense to score the first run of the game. An error started the trouble and Moore finally knocked in the run with a single.

The Lions struck for two insurance runs in the bottom of the fifth after two were out. Shrum singled and another runner was safe on an error. Robert Droke slammed a double plating both runners.

The only threat that the Royals made was in the top of the seventh as two singles followed two outs.

Senath will be the host team in the finals May 10.

Nuggest even series with Nets

DENVER (AP) — Denver Nuggets Coach Larry Brown insisted his team "learned a lot of things" after dropping the opening game of its American Basketball Association championship series with the New York Nets.

One of the lessons, obviously, was how to beat the Nets. Denver got its fast-break offense rolling in the scond half and got better inside penetration with the ball to post a 127-121 victory Tuesday night and square the best-of-seven series at 1-1. Game Three will be played Thursday night in New York.

Some remedial work, however, will be necessary on how to stop New York forward Julius "Dr. J." Erving.

Erving, who scored 45 points in the opener, tossed in 48 points Tuesday night. As in the first game, Erving did pretty much what he wanted.

His 25 points in the fourth quarter set a pro basketball playoff-game record for scoring in a period, and his 37 points in the second half likewise set a pro playoff mark.

"The way he's playing now it's incredible," said Denver forward Bobby Jones, who has the unenviable task of defending Erving.

"We've tried to keep him outside, away from the basket," said Jones. "And we have to deny him the ball as much as possible. But it's tough, and he's really shooting well besides."

Erving connected on 15 of 23 two-point field goal attempts, a pair of three-pointers, and 12 of 16 foul shots. He added 14 rebounds, eight assists, three steals and a blocked shot.

But Erving's efforts were in vain as Denver's balanced scoring attack prevailed before an ABA-record crowd of 19,107.

Guard Ralph Simpson, forced to play all but two minutes of the game because of a shortage of backcourt performers, had 25 points. Forwards Jones and David Thompson and center Dan Issel each scored 24.

Jones and Thompson both scored 12 points in the third period as theNuggets surged to a 12-point lead.

After the Nets pulled within two points early in the fourth quarter, Issel hit five quick baskets, helping Denver take a 101-92 edge with 7:27 remaining.

But the Nuggets still had Erving to contend with. A flurry of steals that produced baskets and Erving's three-point goal pulled the Nets within four points with 1:26 left.

The Nets were to get no closer, as Simpson promptly scored on a three-point play and Jones added a field goal for a 126-117 lead.

During the final quarter, the Nuggets hit 67 per cent from the floor and the Nets 61 per cent. Their combined 82 points in the quarter set a pro record for points in a playoff period.

Game Four of the series is scheduled for Saturday night, also in New York. A fifth game will be played in Denver next Tuesday night.

I-SC Rams blast Oran

ORAN — The Illmo-Scott City Rams eliminated the Oran Eagles from the District 12 Class A state tournament here Tuesday afternoon by the score of 13-1 in five innings.

Hard throwing lefthander Gary Springs spun a two-hitter against the Eagles in picking up the victory. Keith Campbell suffered the loss. The victory gave Springs a 6-0 slate on the year.

Campbell came out throwing hard in the top of the first inning but was wild and issued walks to the first two batters which got him into trouble right away. Ray Campbell followed the walks with a ringing double to left scoring one run but the second runner was tagged out trying to get back to third after rounding the bag too far. After a walk loaded the bases again Campbell fanned the next two batters to end the threat.

The Rams kept the pressure on the Eagles in the second inning as a run scored on a fielders choice to give Springs a 2-0 cushion to work with. The Eagles were having their troubles with the zipping fastball of the Ram hurler though and never could mount any kind of threat.

Campbell smacked Springs on his pitching arm in the top of first inning but after some rubbing and pain killer along with ice packs in the later innings the classy lefthander was nearly unhitable.

The only run that the Eagles could muster was a long fly ball to leftcenter by Senciboy that landed smack in the middle of a trash pile which was an automatic homerun.

After two errors helped the Rams score three runs in the third the Rams began to connect on a tiring Keith Campbell in the fourth inning as Steve Heinkebein blasted a long homerun between the left and centerfields with one on.

An error, walk, and two hit batters followed by two singles produced five runs in the top of the fifth to end the game. Oran was unable to score off Springs in the bottom half of the frame. Scott City is 8-5 on the season.

Lions move to District 10 finals

SENATH — Senath-Hornersville advanced to the finals of the District 10 Class A state tournament here Tuesday with a 3-0 victory over the Twin Rivers Royals.

The Royals had upset the first seeded Nellyville Tigers last week. Senath was seeded fourth in the tournament.

Bob Milligan hurled a three hitter and struckout 14 Lions en route to the victory. Nick McBroom suffered the loss but allowed only five safeties.

The game was a three up and three down affair until the bottom of the fourth inning when Senath took advantage of a lapse in the Royals defense to score the first run of the game. An error started the trouble and Moore finally knocked in the run with a single.

The Lions struck for two insurance runs in the bottom of the fifth after two were out. Shrum singled and another runner was safe on an error. Robert Droke slammed a double plating both runners.

The only threat that the Royals made was in the top of the seventh as two singles followed two outs.

Senath will be the host team in the finals May 10.

Sickle cell anemia, which occurs in one of about every 500 black Americans, is sometimes severe and may be crippling. The red blood cells of persons with sickle cell anemia may at times assume a crescent or sickle cell shape. These misshapen cells may plug small blood vessels, leading to episodes of pain called crises.

The office of state representative is a position of public trust and the peple in the district have the right to demand a full accounting of every candidate's background and qualification for the office."

Drainage districts can also condemn for their ditches and then levy a tax on the land to be drained.

The most notiable federal condemnation action ever taken in the Bootheel is the spillway area along the Mississippi River, Judge Craig said. The 30,000 -acre area was used to prevent flooding.

A discussion between the speakers and the audience followed the talks.

Many of the people showed a concern over the relationship between the government and property rights.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, a dropout from the active campaign, 65,409, or 12 per cent.

Carter won 48 delegates, Wallace six, with 21 uncommitted.

Democratic Sen. Vance Hartke won renomination over Rep. Philip H. Hayes. Secretary of State Larry A. Conrad won the Democratic nomination to oppose Republican Gov. Otis R. Bowen.

Georgia

With 98 per cent of the precincts counted:

Reagan 124,880, or 68 per cent.

Ford 57,795, or 32 per cent.

That meant 48 delegates for Reagan.

Democrat Carter had 408,397, or 84 per cent.

Wallace 56,357, or 12 per cent.

Democrats held separate competition for delegates, and Carter won all 50.

Alabama

With 13 per cent of the Republican precincts counted, Reagan led for 31 delegates.

In the Democratic primary, with 64 per cent of the precincts in, Wallace was winning 29 delegates, Carter three, and three were uncommitted.

District of Columbia

Carter led for seven delegates, Rep. Morris K. Udall for four, and two uncommitted entries were ahead, with 45 per cent of the precincts counted.

That meant Reagan had won 124 delegates on his biggest day as a candidate, for his national total of 360. Ford captured only nine, to get to 292.

It will take 1,130 to name a GOP nominee.

Ford has had reserve delegate strength in the ranks of nominally uncommitted Republicans, including 254 delegates elected in the New York and Pennsylvania primaries.

Morton said the Ford organization will move to tie down those delegates, but that may be difficult just now. With Ford in difficulty, they may want to see some more primaries before deciding how to go. The convention is three months away, and given the new look of the Republican race, uncommitted status may look good to them.

Reagan's road upward began when he started hitting hard at Ford on foreign and defense policy, claiming the United States has slipped to second place militarily. Ford struck back with harshly-worded denials, said Reagan was glib, superficial and inexperienced. That didn't counter the Reagan thrust, and it is not evident what Ford can do now to cope with that campaign offensive.

FLAG DAY

CHICAGO (AP) — Flag Day, June 14, was first officially observed in 1877 to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the selection of the flag, according to "World Book Encyclopedia."

Congress requested all public buildings to fly the flag on June 14th of that year. Suggestions to make Flag Day an annual event followed.

Landowners act against annexation proposal

SCOTT CITY (Special) — Landowners outside Scott City in the three proposed annexation areas crowded into City Council chambers Monday night to present to the council arguments against the action.

An ordinance regarding the annexation proposal is being prepared and will be voted on by the council as a preliminary step to placing the matter on the ballot in August.

Raymond Heisserer, who owns farmland northwest of here, urged the council to reconsider its annexation plans and to stop it immediately. He pointed out that extra taxes imposed on land owners by the annexation would be unreasonable, and that people reaching retirement age would find it difficult to pay their taxes.

Mrs. Dorothy Ingemanson, who lives northwest of the present city limits, told the council it was unfair to annex their lands into the city since they (the residents) have no voice in the matter. She said she believes the annexation is for tax purposes only, and that those owning a larger portion of land would be paying more taxes than persons residing in town.

Barney Stubenrauch, who owns land on the south side outside the city limits, told the council his property is pastureland and asked how it would be affected with an ordinance barring livestock in the city limits.

Mayor James Cauble told Mr. Stubenrauch that agriculture land taken into the city would remain zoned this way, and that he would be allowed to continue using his property as pastureland unless his animals constituted a nuisance to neighbors.

Another landowner, Lawrence Diebold, said he has discussed annexation with several townspeople who believe it is not necessary for the city to acquire more land.

Sam Drusch, a Cape Girardeau attorney, was present to represent Charles Daniels, landowner in one of the proposed annexation parcels. The council was asked to certify what it expects of Mr. Daniels in the development of his planned subdivision in exchange for city water. The Daniels property abounds the new city park on the west.

The council replied it expects Mr. Daniels to provide paved streets, sewers and water for his subdivision. If he is provided water to his property line, he will be asked to sign a statement he is in favor of annexation of his land, and that if he does not develop the subdivision, he will reimburse the city's expense of running water lines through the park to his property.

In earlier meeting with the mayor, Mr. Daniels said he favors annexation. Mayor Cauble, using a map, explained that proposed annexation routes would be determined by following quarter lines on county plats.

Several neighbors of Mayor Cauble were present to voice objection to recent action take by Mr. Cauble and Jess Johnson in claiming land they say legally is theirs and which neighbors claim to be a city street. The mayor read a letter concerning the issue from Tom Arnold, city attorney, in which Mr. Arnold urged that the council make a final decision regarding the land in question.

Earl Fehr, a resident on Wheeler drive, presented a petition signed by all property owners requesting that Wheeler from Steck to Kimberly be paved. He said owners are willing to put their portion of the paving costs into escrow immediately. The council approved the project.

Robert Harrison, city engineer, was told to prepare a hydraulic survey and control study to be sent to the Division of Health in preparatory steps for installation of the recently purchased 100,000-gallon water tank.

Because Mrs. Donna Spies has just begun her duties as city clerk water bills will be a few days late, Mayor Cauble said.

New oil strikes in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government says its new oil fields in the southern states of Tabasco and Chiapas have boosted its estimate of the country's petroleum reserves to between 30 and 60 billion barrels, three to six times that of Alaska's North Slope.

Francisco Javier Alejo, the secretary of natural resources, told a news conference Tuesday Mexico's proven reserves are now 7 billion barrels, an increase of 1 billion since March.

"We have just begun to explore," he said. "We believe 90 to 95 per cent of the national territory is capable of producing hydrocarbons of one type or another."

Alejo added that the Gulf of Mexico also promises to be a source of oil for Mexico as well as for the United States.

A year ago Alejo said foreign speculation that the new southern fields contained 20 billion barrels in reserves were "irresponsible."

The minister also announced that the government plans to join the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) as soon as it is invited.

The big new estimate of oil reserves and the overture to OPEC constituted a major change in Mexican oil policy. Mexico repeatedly refused to join the oil cartel, and President Luis Echeverria criticized OPEC members for not spending more of their oil earnings in other underdeveloped nations.

Since last year, Mexico has been exporting 113,000 barrels of crude oil and other petroleum products a day, making it the third largest Latin American oil exporter after Venezuela and Ecuador.

Alejo said the daily rate of exports should double this year, bringing in at least $2.4 million a day.

Ford still considering election commission bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential candidates hungering for federal campaign funds apparently will have to wait a few days to learn whether President Ford will sign or veto the Federal Election Commission bill that would start the money flowing again.

White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Tuesday that Ford will spend a couple of days studying the measure before he decides what to do.

The Senate passed the compromise bill Tuesday by a 62 to 29 vote. The margin in the House was 291 to 81. Both votes were more than the two-thirds margin necessary to override a presidential veto.

Ford has received mixed advice about the bill from Republican leaders in Congress.

Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, the senior Republican on the conference committee that came up with the compromise bill, said Ford should sign it.

But House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona and Senate Republican Whip Robert Griffin of Michigan voted against the bill.

Ford had urged Congress to enact a bill making the six FEC members presidential appointees to conform with a Supreme Court ruling that said it was unconstitutional for Congress to appoint some members.

Under the court decison, the commission lost its power to disburse campaign funds in March when Congress failed to restructure it.

Meanwhile, presidential candidates have continued filing applications with the FEC for federal matching campaign funds. The latest figures announced by the FEC on Tuesday showed candidates have applied for $3.77 million in matching funds. Before the cutoff of funds, the FEC disbursed $12.6 million to the candidates.

The biggest request for FEC money, $1.41 million, is from Ford.

The delay in passage of the bill stemmed from a bitter partisan fight between the Democratic majority and the minority Republicans.

The Democrats used the opportunity given them by the Supreme Court decison to rewrite election laws to change earlier FEC rulings.

They also gave Congress a veto power over commission rulings, a provision Republicans contend gives the Democratic majority and all incumbents a chance to reject commission opinions they don't like.

The FEC opinion that touched off the greatest furor among the Democrats was its authorization of the use of corporate funds to set up committees to solicit campaign contributions from workers to be donated to candidates considered favorable to corporate interests.

Democrats included a provision in the new bill to bar corporate committees from soliciting funds from anyone other than stockholders, company executives and administrative personnel and their families. Labor committees would be limited to soliciting from union members.

But the compromise bill added a provision that allowed the committees to solicit contributions from all employes by mail.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The British Governor of Massachusetts, Gen. Thomas Gage, knew many of the colonies in 1775 were intensely suspicious of the argumentative, fanatically inclined New Englanders. He did everything in his power to project a peacemakers' image and avoid an outbreak of hostilities. Gage severely disciplined any of his troops found guilty of abusing the inhabitants and tried, with considerable skill, to isolate the radicals from the moderates. If Gage had been permitted to pursue his policy for another three to four months, it is believed that the war might not have begun, The World Almanac notes.

Ford planning to veto $4 billion in foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is planning to veto a $4-billion foreign aid bill that would impose congressional controls on foreign sales of military equipment while opening trade with Vietnam for a trial period.

In announcing on Tuesday that the President would veto the foreign aid measure today, White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Ford was concerned that the measure would tie his hands in conducting foreign policy.

Veto of the bill is likely to touch off a new election-year clash between Ford and the Democratic Congress.

The foreign aid measure includes $3 billion in military aid and credit sales to Middle East countries, with $2.2 billion earmarked for Israel and $750 million for Egypt over a 15-month period. Funds also are authorized for other countries, including Korea, Greece and Turkey.

When the legislation was clearing a House-Senate conference committee Ford made it known he objected to restrictions it placed on presidential powers. He later told congressional leaders he considered these provisions a congressional invasion of his authority.

Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, said he did not think Congress could override a presidential veto and the House may not even try.

Meanwhile, U.S. foreign military aid will continue to be distributed at last year's levels under a "continuing resolution."

Morgan said he has told his committee staff to start drafting a new two-year foreign aid bill to be resubmitted for a new vote. Ford specifically objected to these provisions of the bill:

—A $9-billion ceiling on U.S. weapons sales in any one year.

—Congressional authority to veto any military aid sale of $25 million or more and to veto sales of any specific weapons, including major defense equpment.

Ford planning to veto $4 billion in foreign aid

Landowners act against annexation proposal

SCOTT CITY (Special) — Landowners outside Scott City in the three proposed annexation areas crowded into City Council chambers Monday night to present to the council arguments against the action.

An ordinance regarding the annexation proposal is being prepared and will be voted on by the council as a preliminary step to placing the matter on the ballot in August.

Raymond Heisserer, who owns farmland northwest of here, urged the council to reconsider its annexation plans and to stop it immediately. He pointed out that extra taxes imposed on land owners by the annexation would be unreasonable, and that people reaching retirement age would find it difficult to pay their taxes.

Mrs. Dorothy Ingemanson, who lives northwest of the present city limits, told the council it was unfair to annex their lands into the city since they (the residents) have no voice in the matter. She said she believes the annexation is for tax purposes only, and that those owning a larger portion of land would be paying more taxes than persons residing in town.

Barney Stubenrauch, who owns land on the south side outside the city limits, told the council his property is pastureland and asked how it would be affected with an ordinance barring livestock in the city limits.

Mayor James Cauble told Mr. Stubenrauch that agriculture land taken into the city would remain zoned this way, and that he would be allowed to continue using his property as pastureland unless his animals constituted a nuisance to neighbors.

Another landowner, Lawrence Diebold, said he has discussed annexation with several townspeople who believe it is not necessary for the city to acquire more land.

Sam Drusch, a Cape Girardeau attorney, was present to represent Charles Daniels, landowner in one of the proposed annexation parcels. The council was asked to certify what it expects of Mr. Daniels in the development of his planned subdivision in exchange for city water. The Daniels property abounds the new city park on the west.

The council replied it expects Mr. Daniels to provide paved streets, sewers and water for his subdivision. If he is provided water to his property line, he will be asked to sign a statement he is in favor of annexation of his land, and that if he does not develop the subdivision, he will reimburse the city's expense of running water lines through the park to his property.

In earlier meeting with the mayor, Mr. Daniels said he favors annexation. Mayor Cauble, using a map, explained that proposed annexation routes would be determined by following quarter lines on county plats.

Several neighbors of Mayor Cauble were present to voice objection to recent action take by Mr. Cauble and Jess Johnson in claiming land they say legally is theirs and which neighbors claim to be a city street. The mayor read a letter concerning the issue from Tom Arnold, city attorney, in which Mr. Arnold urged that the council make a final decision regarding the land in question.

Earl Fehr, a resident on Wheeler drive, presented a petition signed by all property owners requesting that Wheeler from Steck to Kimberly be paved. He said owners are willing to put their portion of the paving costs into escrow immediately. The council approved the project.

Robert Harrison, city engineer, was told to prepare a hydraulic survey and control study to be sent to the Division of Health in preparatory steps for installation of the recently purchased 100,000-gallon water tank.

Because Mrs. Donna Spies has just begun her duties as city clerk water bills will be a few days late, Mayor Cauble said.

New oil strikes in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government says its new oil fields in the southern states of Tabasco and Chiapas have boosted its estimate of the country's petroleum reserves to between 30 and 60 billion barrels, three to six times that of Alaska's North Slope.

Francisco Javier Alejo, the secretary of natural resources, told a news conference Tuesday Mexico's proven reserves are now 7 billion barrels, an increase of 1 billion since March.

"We have just begun to explore," he said. "We believe 90 to 95 per cent of the national territory is capable of producing hydrocarbons of one type or another."

Alejo added that the Gulf of Mexico also promises to be a source of oil for Mexico as well as for the United States.

A year ago Alejo said foreign speculation that the new southern fields contained 20 billion barrels in reserves were "irresponsible."

The minister also announced that the government plans to join the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) as soon as it is invited.

The big new estimate of oil reserves and the overture to OPEC constituted a major change in Mexican oil policy. Mexico repeatedly refused to join the oil cartel, and President Luis Echeverria criticized OPEC members for not spending more of their oil earnings in other underdeveloped nations.

Since last year, Mexico has been exporting 113,000 barrels of crude oil and other petroleum products a day, making it the third largest Latin American oil exporter after Venezuela and Ecuador.

Alejo said the daily rate of exports should double this year, bringing in at least $2.4 million a day.

'I have been born again'

The transformation of Dean Jones

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Dean Jones projects the image of the all-American boy so well he's now starring in his ninth Disney movie. The folks at Disney hardly ever go for the Charles Bronson type, except maybe to play a heavy.

But, until fairly recently, the on-and off-screen Dean Jones were two different people. On screen, he was a clean-cut character, totally. But, off screen was a different matter.

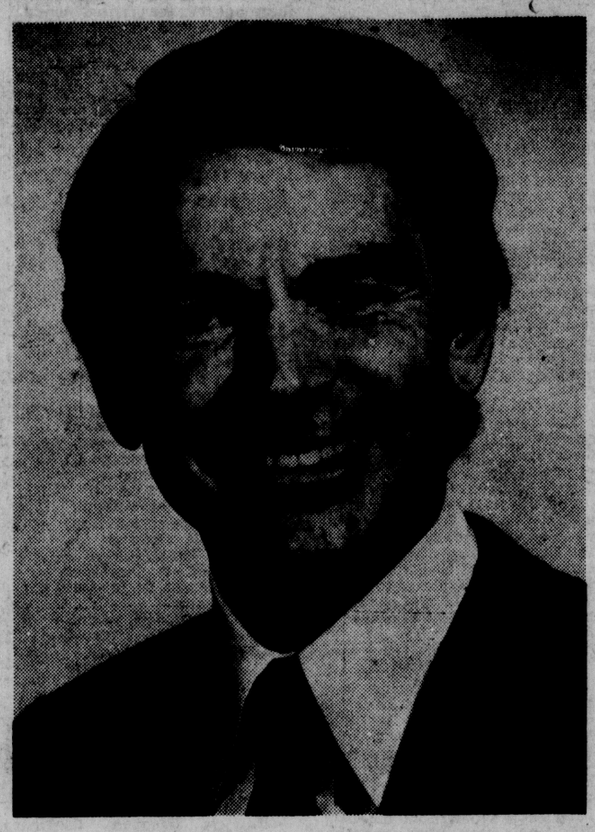
"I used to chase girls pretty good," he says, "and I had a couple of days a week when I drank too much."

That period in his life is gone forever, he believes. What caused the transformation was his finding God.

Jones comes originally from Decatur, Ala., a Southern farm boy.

"I grew up on an Alabama farm," he says. "My folks were Methodists and I went to church regularly as a boy. But I left the church for many years."

His prime concern, during that non-church period, was material success. Fame and fortune are part of the American dream, of course, so it was only natural.



ALL-AMERICAN IMAGE presented on-screen by Dean Jones was marred until recently by such off-screen hobbies as girl chasing and heavy drinking.

"As a kid on the farm," he says, "I dreamed of being a success. For a long time, I felt that was all I wanted or needed to be happy. To me, happiness meant being a movie star, a record star, a star of a Broadway musical with fantastic reviews.

"And I did all those things. I achieved success, according to what I believed success to be. But I found out it wasn't enough.

"There was," he says, "always something missing. So I'd set other goals for myself, and always I achieved them. Yet, the achievement was empty, and still there was something missing in my life."

Just about three years ago, Jones was in New Jersey rehearsing for a play, "1776". He was staying in a motel in Cherry Hill. The empty feeling was upon him in a particularly strong way.

He came back to his motel room after a day of rehearsing, feeling particularly low.

"I felt so empty I was completely miserable," he says. So I got down on my knees and prayed, and I hadn't done that in years.

"'God,' I prayed, 'I don't know if you exist or not. And I haven't tried to talk to you in years. But if you are there, please help me find some reason for living.'"

Jones says he immediately "felt something," which was, to him, an indication that he had been heard.

"Three days later," he says, "I said another prayer. 'God, I'll make a deal with you. If you will help me find my way, I promise I'll devote my life to spreading your word.'"

He says that immediately upon requesting that bargain, he felt a tremendous weight lifted from his shoulders. It was a weight, he says, that must have been there for years, although he had been unaware of it.

"Since that moment," he says, "I feel as though I have been born again."

A year later, Jones and his wife, Lory, accepted Christ and, he says, the result has been a total transformation in his life. He believes he is now acting better than he ever has and he knows he feels better. Gone are all his worries and fears.

"Today," he says, "my life means something."

He and Lory went to Mexico City to the famous shrine of Our Lady of Guadelupe. During the service, the priest said that anyone who wanted to be healed could now pray.

Lory had long been troubled with arthritis in her hands, her elbows and up to her shoulders. Both Dean and Lory prayed, as directed.

"I tried to put aside my skepticism," he says, "as I asked the Lord to heal Lory's arthritis. And, in a few days, the calcium deposits in her fingers and hand vanished and she is no longer troubled by arthritis."

Today, Dean Jones exudes happiness. He sprinkles his conversation with Biblical quotations. He and Lory attend a church — "it was one recommended by a Jewish friend" — and looks forward to it every week.

He's now co-starring with Suzanne Pleshette in the Disney film, "The Shaggy D.A." The two have done several films together and are good friends.

Whenever she says "goddammit," he always counters with "Praise the Lord."

He has kept his part of his prayerful bargain with the Lord. At the moment, he is preparing to go out on the road with a show, "If My People," which he describes as an effort to get all Americans to pray for America. The plan is to play in 76 cities in '76.

Jones says he still drinks — but only a little wine, and he makes that himself.

"I believe it is not against His teachings to drink a little wine," he says.

He says it with a smile. And a look in his eye of total peace.

ITALIAN CHEESE CAKE

3 (8oz.) pkg. cream cheese, room temperature
4 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. vanilla

Preheat oven to 350. Make a graham cracker crust with crumbs and melted butter. Press into a pan, or into the bottom of cupcake papers in a muffin tin.

Beat cheese and sugar in mixer. Add eggs and rest of ingredients. Pour into pan and bake for 25 min. Cool and glaze.

GLAZE

1 carton sour cream
3 Tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

Mix and spread thinly over cake and pop into 400 oven for 5 min. Keep in icebox when cool.

BUTTER CHEESE POUND CAKE

1 pkg. pound cake mix
1 stick real butter
1 beaten egg

Mix above and press into a glass pan. Then mix next ingredients and pour over and bake at 350 for 40 min.

In mixer beat,
1 (8 oz) pkg. cream cheese
2 eggs
1 box powdered sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

DERBY PIE

¾ cup small chocolate chips
1 stick oleo
1 cup sugar
¼ cup flour
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup chopped pecans

Cover bottom of unbaked pie shell with chocolate chips. Melt oleo, add sugar, flour and slightly beaten eggs, vanilla and pecans. Stir well and pour over chips. Bake at 350 for 30-35 min.

PUMPKIN CAKE

4 eggs
1 cup cooking oil
2 cups sugar
2 cups self-rising flour
2 tsp. soda
1 tsp. baking powder
2 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. salt

ICING

SATURDAY REFRESHER

Poppyseed Cake Coffee

SUE GELLMAN'S POPPYSEED CAKE

3 cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 and 1-3rd cups corn oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
14½-ounce can evaporated milk, undiluted
8-ounce can poppyseed filling
1 cup finely chopped walnuts

On wax paper sift together the flour, baking soda and salt. Beat eggs slightly; add sugar and beat until thickened and lemon color. Add oil and vanilla and beat to blend. Gently beat in flour; add evaporated milk, poppyseed filling and nuts; beat gently until batter is smooth. Turn into a greased and floured 10-inch angelfood cake pan and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 70 minutes. (If cake browns too much toward end of baking, place a sheet of foil on top.) Let stand on wire rack for 10 minutes. Loosen edges and around tube and turn out. Cool. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Mix and spread thinly over cake and pop into 400 oven for 5 min. Keep in icebox when cool.

BUTTER CHEESE POUND CAKE

Mix above and press into a glass pan. Then mix next ingredients and pour over and bake at 350 for 40 min.

In mixer beat,
1 (8 oz) pkg. cream cheese

1 box powdered sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

DERBY PIE

¾ cup small chocolate chips
1 stick oleo
1 cup sugar
¼ cup flour
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla

Poppyseed Cake Coffee

SUE GELLMAN'S POPPYSEED CAKE

3 cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 and 1-3rd cups corn oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1¼-ounce can evaporated milk, undiluted
8-ounce can poppyseed filling

1 cup finely chopped walnuts

On wax paper sift together the flour, baking soda and salt. Beat eggs slightly; add sugar and beat until thickened and lemon color. Add oil and vanilla and beat to blend. Gently beat in flour; add evaporated milk, poppyseed filling and nuts; beat gently until batter is smooth. Turn into a greased and floured 10-inch angelfood cake pan and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 70 minutes. (If cake browns too much toward end of baking, place a sheet of foil on top.) Let stand on wire rack for 10 minutes. Loosen edges and around tube and turn out. Cool. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

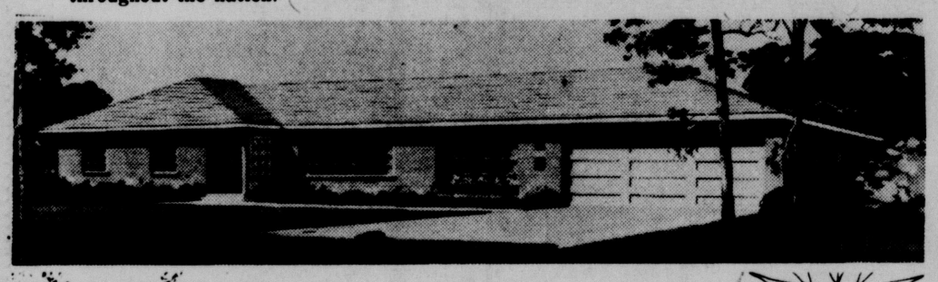
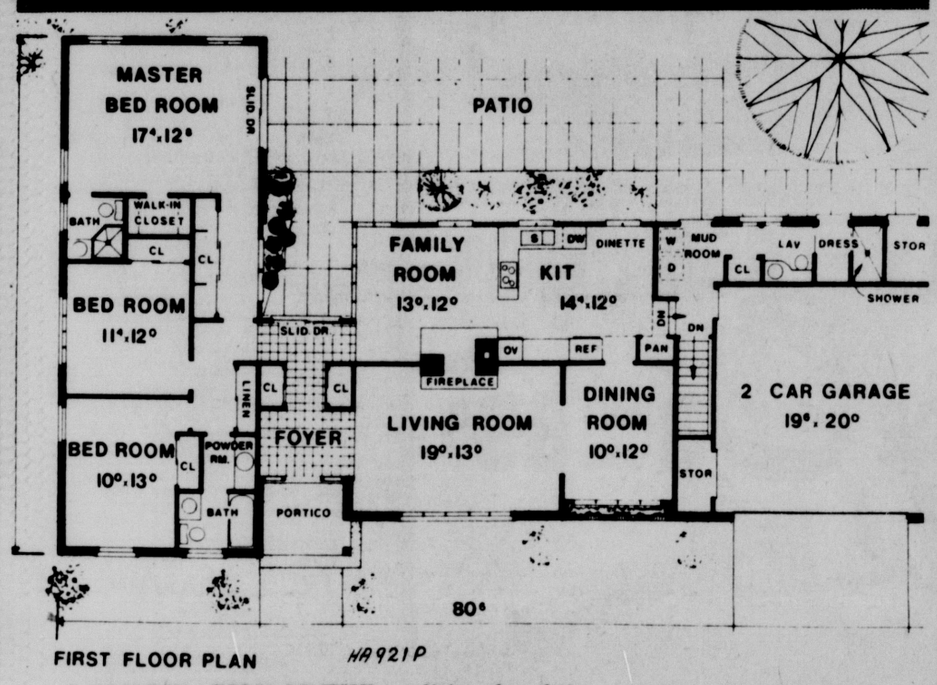
ALTHOUGH THE UNITED STATES OFFICIALLY DECLARED ITS INDEPENDENCE ON JULY 4, 1776, THE FOUNDATION FOR AMERICAN FREEDOM WAS ACTUALLY LAID MORE THAN A YEAR PRIOR TO THAT HISTORIC DATE!

ON JUNE 14, 1775, THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS ESTABLISHED THE UNITED STATES ARMY, A FIGHTING FORCE THAT HAS CONTINUALLY DEFENDED AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE FOR 200 YEARS

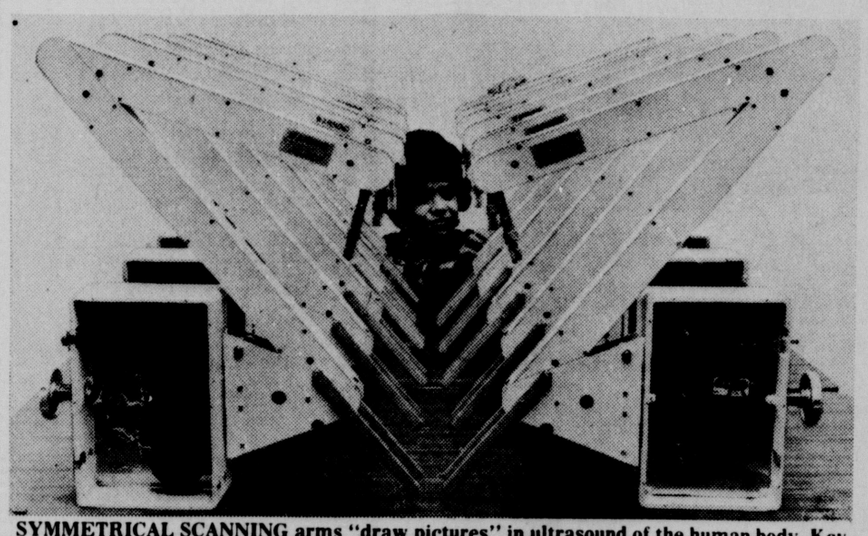
The possibility of Communist participation in the Italian government, either in a reshuffling of the present Christian Democrat-dominated coalition or as the dominant party after new elections, is sending shock waves through Italy's NATO allies. Situated at the geographical heart of the alliance, Italy has long had the West's largest Communist party, which now declares it favors a "pluralistic and democratic" system rather than a Soviet-style dictatorship and is willing to share power. Cities shown are under Communist administration, many won in recent local elections in an upsurge of party strength throughout the nation.





FIRST FLOOR PLAN HA921P

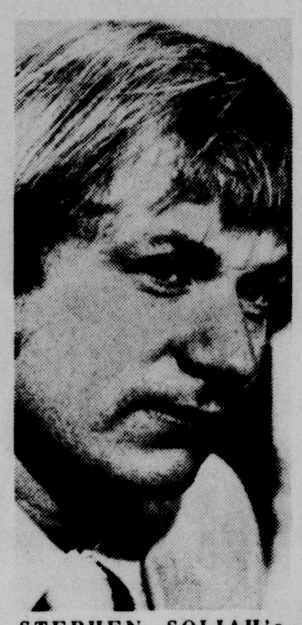
A COMBINATION OF THE traditional and the contemporary was used to create "balance" in this ranch house. A tiled entrance foyer connects while at the same time separating all the main house areas. To the right of the foyer, and occupying the entire front, are the living and dining rooms which share a cathedral ceiling. In the rear are the family room and kitchen. The bedroom wing includes a large master bedroom suite with sliding glass doors leading to the patio. Plan HA921P, with 1,752 square feet of basic area, was designed by Samuel Paul, 107-40 Queens Blvd., Forest Hills, N.Y., 11375. Questions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.



SYMMETRICAL SCANNING arms "draw pictures" in ultrasound of the human body. Key elements of a medical diagnostic system, they emit sound waves and coordinate positions so that echoes produce cross-sectional body readings for study by physicians. Rose Louise Asmus checks out the arms at Northford, Conn., plant of Picker Corp.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED in coaxing a St. Bernard out of a comfy car, apply some muscle. That was the approach of John Swett, 11, of Floral City, Fla., when a lazy lady by the name of Lola preferred lounging in a back seat to a romp outdoors. And it worked — sort of.

IT MUST BE the balmy weather that brings out the kitten in this tiger. A resident of the St. Petersburg Beach, Fla., Zoological Gardens, he strikes a soulful pose for the camera.



STEPHEN SOLIAH's defense seeks disclosure of information Patricia Hearst is reported to have given federal prosecutors concerning a 1975 SLA-linked bank robbery. Soliah, described as Miss Hearst's lover, is on trial in Sacramento for the $15,000 Crocker National Bank holdup in which a customer was killed.

SEN. FRED HARRIS says he will remain active in the presidential primary campaign but will henceforth concentrate on influencing the Democratic platform. The Oklahoman withdrew as an active candidate for the nomination following several also-ran primary showings and the depletion of his campaign treasury.

PRIMARY elections aren't as important as they once were said a tousled Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail in Texas where he's entered in the Republican presidential primary May 1. The former California governor's bid for the GOP nomination has suffered heavily in contests against President Ford around the country.

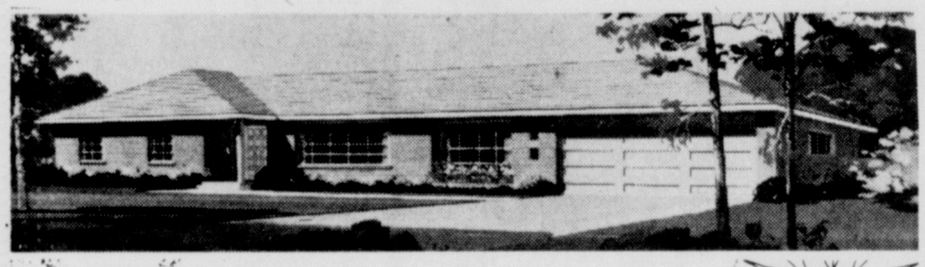
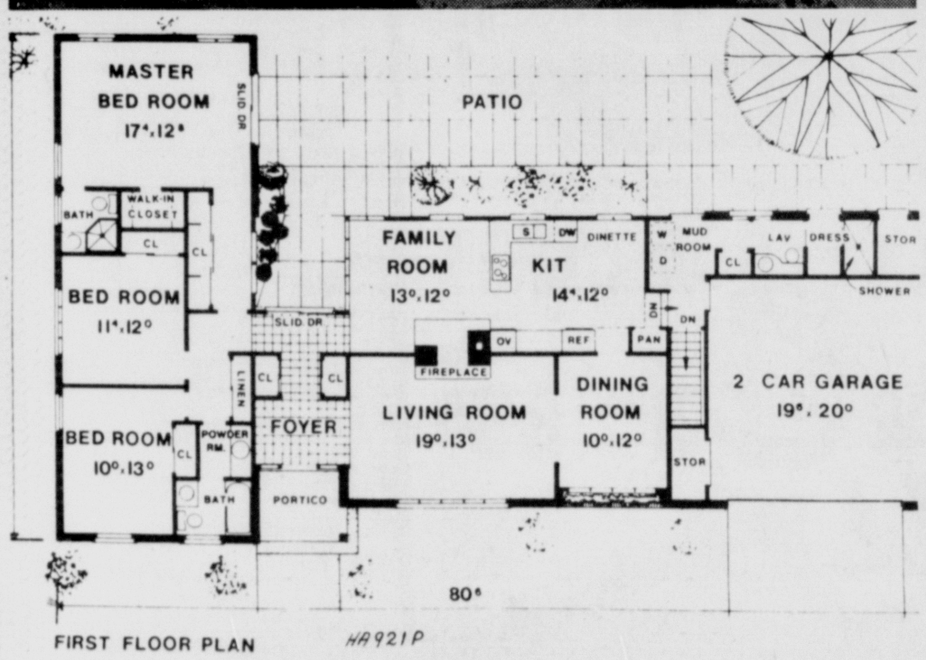
The possibility of Communist participation in the Italian government, either in a reshuffling of the present Christian Democrat-dominated coalition or as the dominant party after new elections, is sending shock waves through Italy's NATO allies. Situated at the geographical heart of the alliance, Italy has long had the West's largest Communist party, which now declares it favors a "pluralistic and democratic" system rather than a Soviet-style dictatorship and is willing to share power. Cities shown are under Communist administration, many won in recent local elections in an upsurge of party strength throughout the nation.





FIRST FLOOR PLAN HA921P

A COMBINATION OF THE traditional and the contemporary was used to create "balance" in this ranch house. A tiled entrance foyer connects while at the same time separating all the main house areas. To the right of the foyer, and occupying the entire front, are the living and dining rooms which share a cathedral ceiling. In the rear are the family room and kitchen. The bedroom wing includes a large master bedroom suite with sliding glass doors leading to the patio. Plan HA921P, with 1,752 square feet of basic area, was designed by Samuel Paul, 107-40 Queens Blvd., Forest Hills, N.Y., 11375. Questions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SYMMETRICAL SCANNING arms "draw pictures" in ultrasound of the human body. Key elements of a medical diagnostic system, they emit sound waves and coordinate positions so that echoes produce cross-sectional body readings for study by physicians. Rose Louise Asmus checks out the arms at Northford, Conn., plant of Picker Corp.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED in coaxing a St. Bernard out of a comfy car, apply some muscle. That was the approach of John Swett, 11, of Floral City, Fla., when a lazy lady by the name of Lola preferred lounging in a back seat to a romp outdoors. And it worked — sort of.

IT MUST BE the balmy weather that brings out the kitten in this tiger. A resident of the St. Petersburg Beach, Fla., Zoological Gardens, he strikes a soulful pose for the camera.

STEPHEN SOLIAH's defense seeks disclosure of information Patricia Hearst is reported to have given federal prosecutors concerning a 1975 SLA-linked bank robbery. Soliah, described as Miss Hearst's lover, is on trial in Sacramento for the $15,000 Crocker National Bank holdup in which a customer was killed.

SEN. FRED HARRIS says he will remain active in the presidential primary campaign but will henceforth concentrate on influencing the Democratic platform. The Oklahoman withdrew as an active candidate for the nomination following several also-ran primary showings and the depletion of his campaign treasury.

PRIMARY elections aren't as important as they once were said a tousled Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail in Texas where he's entered in the Republican presidential primary May 1. The former California governor's bid for the GOP nomination has suffered heavily in contests against President Ford around the country.

Food stamp rules face court action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration's plan to cut $1.2 billion in food stamp costs will force more than five million persons in "working poor" families out of the program, the Agriculture Department says.

Shortly after the department announced on Tuesday the new eligibility rules that take effect on or after June 1, a New York-based group representing food stamp recipients said it would seek a federal court injunction against the rules.

Ronald Pollack, director of the Food Research and Action Center, said more than 20 states, 60 labor unions, 100 families and an array of church and community action groups would file the suit jointly.

Pollack said the new rules discriminate against the working poor and thwart attempts to provide incentives for welfare recipients to work.

The new rules will cover current recipients starting Sept. 1. They will also require most recipients to pay more for the stamps. All will have to spend 30 per cent of their income for stamps; the average now is 24 per cent. They buy the stamps ie$8!))than face value and the government pays the difference.

President Ford ordered the Agriculture Department on Feb. 19 to cut the program, which cost $2.2 billion when started in fiscal 1972.

The program now costs an estimated $5.57 28fg),n a year in benefits and another $400 million in federal administrative costs.

Individuals and families living only on welfare, who comprise nearly 8.7 million of the total 18.8 million persons receiving stamps, would not be forced out of the program. The law bars the department from changing their eligibility by departmental regulation.

Some 5.3 million of the other 10.1 million recipients, who derive some income from work, would be severed. The department said the vast majority of the 5.3 million, who come from 1.7 million families, have annual incomes averaging $6,000 to $9,000. Another 570,000 recipients who earn more than $9,000 also would be denied stamps.

But department officials contend some of the neediest recipients, including the elderly, will pay less under the new system.

To cut eligibility, officials will scrap a complex deduction system that lets families with income over the poverty line use stamps.

In its place, the department will limit stamps to families with income no more than $100 a month above the official non-farm poverty level.

Food stamp rules face court action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration's plan to cut $1.2 billion in food stamp costs will force more than five million persons in "working poor" families out of the program, the Agriculture Department says.

Shortly after the department announced on Tuesday the new eligibility rules that take effect on or after June 1, a New York-based group representing food stamp recipients said it would seek a federal court injunction against the rules.

Ronald Pollack, director of the Food Research and Action Center, said more than 20 states, 60 labor unions, 100 families and an array of church and community action groups would file the suit jointly.

Pollack said the new rules discriminate against the working poor and thwart attempts to provide incentives for welfare recipients to work.

The new rules will cover current recipients starting Sept. 1. They will also require most recipients to pay more for the stamps. All will have to spend 30 per cent of their income for stamps; the average now is 24 per cent. They buy the stamps ie$8t))than face value and the government pays the difference.

President Ford ordered the Agriculture Department on Feb. 19 to cut the program, which cost $2.2 billion when started in fiscal 1972.

The program now costs an estimated $5.57 28fg),n a year in benefits and another $400 million in federal administrative costs.

Individuals and families living only on welfare, who comprise nearly 8.7 million of the total 18.8 million persons receiving stamps, would not be forced out of the program. The law bars the department from changing their eligibility by departmental regulation.

Some 5.3 million of the other 10.1 million recipients, who derive some income from work, would be severed. The department said the vast majority of the 5.3 million, who come from 1.7 million families, have annual incomes averaging $6,000 to $9,000. Another 570,000 recipients who earn more than $9,000 also would be denied stamps.

But department officials contend some of the neediest recipients, including the elderly, will pay less under the new system.

To cut eligibility, officials will scrap a complex deduction system that lets families with income over the poverty line use stamps.

In its place, the department will limit stamps to families with income no more than $100 a month above the official non-farm poverty level.

Presents annual report

State Fire Marshal Robert Morrison, right, presents a copy of the Fire Marshal's second annual report to Public Safety Director Mike Garrett. The fire marshal's report indicates that arson was the single leading cause of fire in Missouri during 1975, causing dollar losses in excess of $16 million.

Arson increase in Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY— Dollar losses resulting from deliberately set fires, as reported by Missouri's fire service agencies, increased from $6 million in 1974 to $11 million in 1975, according to statistics compiled by State Fire Marshal Robert Morrison.

The second annual report of the state fire marshal was presented this week to Public Safety Director Mike Garrett, and indicates that approximately 21 per cent of all fires reported during 1975 were caused by arson.

In addition to losses reported by other agencies, the state fire marshal's office conducted 546 fire scene investigations during 1975, and 280 of the fires investigated were determined to be of incendiary origin, accounting for additional arson losses in excess of $5.5 million.

"These figures indicate that arson is one of Missouri's fastest growing crimes," Morrison said, "and one of the state's most serious crimes in terms of dollar losses. If arson could be eliminated in Missouri, we estimate that the financial loss, injury and death resulting from fire could be reduced by as much as 50 per cent."

In receiving the fire marshal's report, Garrett called for increased efforts at both the state and local level to combat arson in Missouri. "Arson is a crime that threatens all Missourians. Individual citizens may suffer serious injury and death as a result of deliberately set fires.

"Even when there are no apparent victims of this crime, fires resulting from arson increase the cost of fire protection and fire insurance coverage for residents of Missouri communities," Garrett said.

The state fire marshal's office is authorized by law to conduct investigations into the causes, origins and circumstances of fires and related occurrences and to maintain a fire loss reporting system.

During 1975, the state fire marshal also coordinated fire safety inspections for day care and mental health facilities in Missouri, A total of 1,248 such inspections were performed.

MSMA is sponsoring medical education programs

JEFFERSON CITY— Missouri's medical doctors have initiated a voluntary program designed to provide continuing medical education opportunities on a state and local level.

The Missouri State Medical Association announced that effective Jan. 1, the 4,700-member group began accepting credit hours from members participating in the continuing medical education (CME) program.

Dr. R. Allen Chandler of Kansas City, president of the association, said that continuing medical education "is the ongoing organized learning activities carried out by a physician to further his knowledge in his profession."

Until now, most continuing education programs have been offered only on a national scale. To participate in these programs, physicians often must leave their practices and attend seminars in other states.

The MSMA program, which has been approved by the American Medical Association, will provide physicians with learning opportunities in their own geographical areas. Specially selected "site teams" of the MSMA will assess medical education activities being conducted by hospitals, medical societies or voluntary health agencies.

If these organizations receive MSMA accreditation, the seminars offered by the organizations may be counted toward the association's continuing education award.

Five institutions, including three medical schools in the state, have already received MSMA accreditation. In addition, five medical specialty societies and hospitals have expressed interest in gaining accreditation.

To qualify for the association's award, a physician must acquire at least 150 credit hours of continuing medical education within a three-year period. Sixty of these hours must be earned by attending planned seminars sponsored by accredited organizations.

The remainder of the hours may be accumulated by attending programs in other states which are not MSMA accredited, teaching assignments, writing for medical publications, participating in self-assessment examinations and reading medical journals and papers.

High blood pressure is main contributor of heart disease

COLUMBIA — Why is the push on for everyone to have his blood pressure checked? ...especially if a person has no symptoms? In fact, why would it even cross his mind?

Such questions about high blood pressure are common, says Dr. Mary Beyer Ames, chairman of the Missouri Heart Association Hypertension Committee. The example she cites was submitted by an Enid, Okla., newspaper reader to a doctor whose column replies to medical inquiries.

The Missouri Heart Association often receives similar calls from area residents, Dr. Ames notes. Here's how they answer them:

"High blood pressure is the single most important identifiable factor contributing to heart attack, stroke and kidney disease. Twenty-three million Americans have hypertension and many of them will risk premature death and disability unless their blood pressure is reduced."

The Columbia physician adds that high blood pressure usually produces no symptoms until it's too late. "In most cases, doctors don't know what causes it. So I can't stress enough that everyone should have their blood pressure checked regularly. The test is simple, inexpensive and painless, If you have hypertension, it can be controlled."

This disease is a major factor in 500,000 of the nearly 900,000 deaths in this country each year from heart attack and stroke. The odd thing about it is that many of these premature deaths could have been avoided, expresses Dr. Ames.

There's a tendency to think that high blood pressure only afflicts the elderly. But it can occur at any age. "It's an alarming thought, but physicians have detected hypertension in small children, teen-agers and young adults as well as persons in their middle-age," she adds.

Still, hypertension remains neglected. At least half of the 23 million Americans with high blood pressure don't know they have it. Of those who know they have it, only half are being treated adequately.

"The means of controlling high blood pressure are readily available, but the incentive to seek out and continue treatment is too often lacking in hypertension victims. It requires a lot of persistence and attention, and many victims become discouraged. But, in the long run, it's worth it".

"High blood pressure victims ignore other factors, which work with hypertension to increase the probability of heart attack or stroke. The Heart Association calls them risk factors. They include improper diet, cigarette smoking, lack of exercise and obesity."

Heredity also can play a role. Dr. Ames says that persons whose parents have high blood pressure are more likely to have it themselves.

The Missouri Heart Association spokesman points to the need for education to make the public aware of this killer disease: "If people paid more attention to having their blood pressure checked regularly, there'd be a marked increase in Americans who live longer, healthier lives. The drugs are available. But without a cooperative, knowledgeable public, these weapons against the disease known as the 'silent killer' mean nothing.

"This is why the Heart Association conducts community programs aimed at educating and screening potential hypertension victims. Your dollars are needed to assure the continuation of these programs."

Dr. Ames urges Missouri residents to have their blood pressure checked regularly.

The national debt is the total amount the federal government owes because of money borrowed by selling bonds and certificates of indebtedness.

Symington endorses fair campaign practice

ST. LOUIS — Jim Symington, Second District Rep. a candidate for the United States Senate, has endorsed the code of fair campaign practices distributed by the Fair Campaign Practices Committee, a non-partisan organization which has been called the "conscience of American politics."

Symington signed a pledge to conduct his campaign according to basic principles of decency, honesty and fair play. In signing the pledge, Symington promised to discuss the issues, present his record and policies with sincerity and frankness and to condemn the use of appeals to prejudice, character defamation, slander and the distortion of an opponent's record.

Symington said that, while he doubted that many candidates would resort to outright slander of an opponent, "some do tend to subtly stretch the truth or distort an opponent's position for their personal advantage."

For that reason, he said, he believes the article of the pledge which condemns "the use of campaign material of any sort which misrepresents, distorts or otherwise falsifies the facts regarding any candiate," was particularly important.

"I don't like negative campaigns, and I hope that all the candidates for the Senate will agree that we should conduct this campaign on a high level, without personal attacks," Symington said.

With the widespread disillusionment about politicians today, I believe the public is entitled to specific assurances that we will do that."

Girl Scouts to honor friends of scouting

The Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council will honor individuals, who have given financial assistance to the sustaining membership program since the formation of the program in 1965, at a dinner tonight in the First United Methodist Church banquet room.

Mrs. Lou Dye, 308 Kramer Drive, council president, will present the address of welcome. The opening ceremonies, involving Girl Scouts and Brownies from Sikeston and Bloomfield, will be presented under the direction of Elizabeth Welborn of Bloomfield, and ...

Horace Dunagan of Caruthersville, banker, civic leader and active campaigner in Girl Scout fund raising, will serve as master of ceremonies.

John Hall Dalton, a Kennett attorney and civic leader, will express the appreciation of the council for the support given by the residents of the area and will stress the importance of area financial support for this youth organization.

The Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council has a membership of approximately 3,000 girls between the ages of 6 and 17, with the geographic range of the council from the Delta region of Mississippi, Pemiscot, Scott. Stoddard, Dunklin and New Madrid counties to the Ozark foothills of Butler, Ripley and Carter counties.

The Council Program offers day camp and established camping programs during the summer months. Camp Latonka, located on Lake Wappapello, has four 12-day sessions, beginning in June and running until mid-August. The camp is also used for individual troop camping during the remainder of the year.

In 1975, the council hosted a wider opportunity event, known as "The Missouri Bootheel Kicks," involving 104 participants from the United States, Bolivia and India. This year the council will have 18 scouts participating in such events throughout the United States and Mexico.

In addition to these activities, the scouting program involves girls in the business of making the community in which they live a better place in which to live through coming to know, to care and to be involved.

PARIS — (NEA) — No celebration of national importance is complete without a fireworks display.

The Bicentennial ceremonies, commemorating the 200th birthday of the United States, are no exception and, therefore, of particular interest to the house of Ruggieri, the world-renowned specialists in pyrotechnical displays whose history goes back 235 years.

While it is said that fire rockets, or crackers, were first invented in China (as most everything else) thousands of years ago, they bore no resemblance to the models which Ruggieri turns out for the exhibitions they have mounted when a great event called for a celebration in the Western Hemisphere.

Arrangements are now being completed for a colossal show in Washington on June 1. The National Gallery, opening a special exhibition, "The Eye of Thomas Jefferson," will be illuminated by a galaxy of stars, rockets, suns, showers, fountains — a pyrodrama in the best traditions of Ruggieri.

The original Ruggieri brothers came from Bologna, Italy, and were appointed by Louis XVth as "King's Master Fireworkers." Inheritors of a tradition dating back to 1739, the secrets of an art perpetually renewed have been handed down from generation to generation. Since the beginning, no royal wedding, christening, coronation, imperial visit, official entertainment or international exhibition has lacked a fireworks display by the master artificer Ruggieri. Jefferson, while U.S. minister to France in 1786, wrote of witnessing a Ruggieri, hence the commissioning of the firm National Gallery exhibition.

Then, of course, there is the annual display staged in various sectors of the city for Bastille Day, July 14th, which was only interrupted during the four years of World War II.

At the head office of the house of Ruggieri, situated at the top of an old building a stone's throw from the Champs Elysees, a representative of the firm explained that for all but the simple family displays, they provide the required number of "artificiers" or expert firemakers. In the firm's long history there is the description of the display for the christening of the Imperial Prince. The date was June, 1856. Ruggieri created a gigantic show which cost 50,000 gold francs (impossible to calculate exactly but then certainly more than $1 million). One battalion of National Guards was required to simultaneously light all the pieces required for the "bouquet" of 80,000 rockets. In 1854, when Queen Victoria came to Paris, the Ruggieris were naturally called in. They set up along the Swiss lake at Versailles a regal display, the main piece being a reproduction of Windsor Castle.

The Bicentennial order for Washington, to which ultimately may be added more, is just another medium-sized one in the series of costly explosions punctuating two centuries of French history. Added now to these are the display orders by Iran, Morocco and other North African countries.

Perusing the Ruggieri catalogue (which would delight the heart of any youngster), one can buy more modest pieces for private garden parties, anniversaries or other celebrations for as little as $60. Any set piece ranges from $500 to $5,000 or more according to its importance. Usually a firemaker goes along with orders of any size, because the firm's motto is "security at all costs."

Ruggieri runs its own school of pyrotechnicians in Monteux in Southern France, where they train women as well as men, said a representative. Here, too, is the factory which produces the devices for never-failing enjoyment.

The Ruggieri master fireworkers have also entered another field. It turns out a number of military items as well as fireworks, including rockets. "But only for defensive use" underlined a spokesman. No real shells? No grenades? "Definitely not," was the answer. "We are interested in four things — smoke, light, color and noise."

With the help of the Atomic Energy Commissariat, Ruggieri has developed several specialized departments, especially related to fine mechanics and sheet metal manufacture for electronics. Navigators are well acquainted with the name of Ruggieri on whom they rely for communication and distress signals, assuring security at sea. They also have a rain-making device.

What else? Well, Ruggieri will also undertake the decorating of thoroughfares, streamers, fairy lights, Christmas glitter and torchlight tattoos. They remain, in the 20th century, the most brilliant producers of fireworks. And now, with the creation of their pyrodramas, the first to be created in the world, they have wedded music to fire.

Girl Scouts to honor friends of scouting

The Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council will honor individuals, who have given financial assistance to the sustaining membership program since the formation of the program in 1965, at a dinner tonight in the First United Methodist Church banquet room.

Mrs. Lou Dye, 308 Kramer Drive, council president, will present the address of welcome. The opening ceremonies, involving Girl Scouts and Brownies from Sikeston and Bloomfield, will be presented under the direction of Elizabeth Welborn of Bloomfield, and

Horace Dunagan of Caruthersville, banker, civic leader and active campaigner in Girl Scout fund raising, will serve as master of ceremonies.

John Hall Dalton, a Kennett attorney and civic leader, will express the appreciation of the council for the support given by the residents of the area and will stress the importance of area financial support for this youth organization.

The Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council has a membership of approximately 3,000 girls between the ages of 6 and 17, with the geographic range of the council from the Delta region of Mississippi, Pemiscot, Scott, Stoddard, Dunklin and New Madrid counties to the Ozark foothills of Butler, Ripley and Carter counties.

The Council Program offers day camp and established camping programs during the summer months. Camp Latonka, located on Lake Wappapello, has four 12-day sessions, beginning in June and running until mid-August. The camp is also used for individual troop camping during the remainder of the year.

In 1975, the council hosted a wider opportunity event, known as "The Missouri Bootheel Kicks," involving 104 participants from the United States, Bolivia and India. This year the council will have 18 scouts participating in such events throughout the United States and Mexico.

In addition to these activities, the scouting program involves girls in the business of making the community in which they live a better place in which to live through coming to know, to care and to be involved.

Guardsmen participate in training exercise

POPLAR BLUFF–When 15 minutes equals an hour, time flies!

Just ask any of the 500 Missouri National Guardsmen who participated in a training exercise Saturday and Sunday at the Guard's Wappapello Training Site near here.

Involved in the two days of training were the headquarters and headquarters companies of the 35th Engineer Brigade, the 1138th Engineer Battalion and the 880th Engineer Battalion, all of St. Louis; and the 135th Engineer Group and the 1140th Engineer Battalion, both of Cape Girardeau.

The 35th Brigade, which ran the exercise, is commanded by Col. James R. Crites, whose promotion to brigader general is expected this summer. In civilian life, Col. Crites is a Cape Girardeau optometrist.

After motoring to the training site on Saturday morning, the Guardsmen began a tactical command post exercise which ran for 24 hours according to the clock--from noon Saturday through noon Sunday. But according to the training plan, the exercise scheduled to "play three days."

Eliminating six hours for sleep, this meant that each 15 minutes on the clock added up to an hour on the training schedule. And that, in turn, meant plenty of work for all individuals involved.

A command post exercise, a Guard spokesmen explained, is a test of the ability of staff sections to plan for the utilization of manuever units. A command post exercise which is "tactical" is one conducted in the field under simulated combat conditions.

So, wearing full combat paraphernalia, with tents serving as offices and lightweight folding tables resting on uneven ground serving as working space, the men of the various units were tested on their ability to plan, direct and coordinate both large and small tasks.

Some of the messages received and the action required was not much different from that which might be encountered by an Army unit on any post, such as:

--There was a simulated request from the Red Cross for an elisted man to be granted emergency leave. Orders had to be prepared and travel plans had to be arranged.

--Three weapons were supposedly missing. The proper headquarters had to be advised, an investigation had to be planned and a re-evaluation of weapons security in all units had to be initiated.

--There was a mock Congressional inquiry regarding an inadequate number of chaplains to support the units. Another investigation was called for, along with a plan to correct the situation.

But the command post exercise lconsisted largely of problems which the soliders would only encounter in a wartime theater of operations, including:

--One problem called for the renovation of an airfield, including a design site plan, a construction schedule and a man-hours estimate.

--Another required the staff officers to come up with a plan to take over the complete operation of the utilities of a large city for a 90-120 -day period.

--Still other problems called for plans to construct five substantial float bridges across a large river, to design civilian refugee camps and to monitor nuclear fallout.

The Guardsmen were even required to devise contingency plans to convert two of their engineer battalions to infantry battalions.

Added realism was brought to the exercise by 12 Army Reservists who belong to a Special Forces Detachement in St. Louis. These Green Berets, as they are known by the general public, attempted, as the aggressors, to penetrate the security of the various Guard units bivouaced at the Wappapello Training Site.

Acting both individually and in small groups, they tried to infiltrate the various commands by posing either as civilians or as U.S. military personnel. On several occasions they played the role of enemy patrols and openly attacked various command posts.

Perhaps the most realistic of their activities, however, was a chemical attack–actually tear gas --which the Special Forces troops carried out after nightfall Saturday.

Communities benefits from former Scouts

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Do you wonder why busy business and professional leaders, as well as parents and the public in general, take time out to spend time and money encouraging such activities as Boy Scouts of America?

Look upon the roster of the leaders of your community who help administer the Southeast Missouri Council of Boy Scouts of America, and you will identify the list as a sort of Who's Who in the region. The same is true in other Boy Scout areas.

It is good business to invest time and money in such programs. Want proof?

Scouting's alumni count in its ranks 65 per cent of Air Force Academy graduates, 68 per cent of West Point graduates, 70 per cent of Naval Academy graduates, 72 per cent of Rhodes scholars, 85 per cent of FBI agents and 26 of the first 29 astronauts.

Of student council presidents, 85 per cent were scouts; of Junior class presidents, 80 per cent were scouts; of school publication editors, 75 per cent were scouts; and of football captains, 71 per cent were scouts.

Obviously, the Boy Scout movement produces the leadership of tomorrow for America. Likewise, it produces the leadership of tomorrow for business and the professions. Why should business and professionial leaders not take time to encourage such an investment?

FOUR OF A KIND

NEW YORK (AP) — Jockey Ron Turcotte rode as if there would be no tomorrow on the 25th day of the winter thoroughbred meeting at Aqueduct. He rode the winners of the final four races on the nine-race program, figuring in a $34.60 exacta and a triple paying $670. None of his four mounts went off as the favorite and his final winner of the day returned $16.60.

St. Francis to receive one of two CAT Scanners

CAPE GIRARDEAU--Cape Girardeau hospitals learned Friday that Drs. Stephen Kallins and Michael Weinstein, consultants from Cleveland, Ohio, had completed their study of the two facilities and recommended that the Compututerized Axial Tomography (CAT) scanner be placed at the new St. Francis Medical Center.

Both St. Francis and Southeast Missouri Hospital had made applications for the CAT scaner, a new ultra-modern diagnostic tool. Since only one unit should be located in Cape Girardeau, the boards of trustees of both institutions agreed to abide by the decision of the consultants who were recommended by the American College of Raiology.

Drs. Kallins and Weinstein indicated in their concluding remarks that both hospitals were very comparable in their types of services and level of patient care.

They based their final decision on the fact that St. Francis would have a physician on duty 24 hours a day at the new site.

In their judgment, if the unit is to be utilized to its fullest capacilities, it is important that a physician be available at all times. St. Francis will have full-time physician coverage in its new emergency room-trauma center.

Another reason cited was the availability of neurologists who come from Memphis to St. Francis on a regularly scheduled basis to supervise the St. Francis Neurologcal Clinic.

Both administrators, James R. Stricker and John J. Keusenkothen, stressed that the CAT scanner will be a valuable resource for Southeast Missouri and the surrounding areas. They indicated that in the future the public will see many more examples of close cooperation between the hospitals as they plan very carefully to prevent duplication of service and equipment.

Aging office to present state plan for the public

JEFFERSON CITY–A state plan for the expenditure of $9,440,000 in federal funds on programs for the state's elderly will be presented by the State Office of Aging at a public hearing at 1 p.m. May 19 in the House Lounge, located on the third floor of the State Capitol Building.

The hearing will give the public an opportunity to express opinions and ideas on the plan, which allocates funds to the state's nine area Agencies on Aging for such things as senior centers, transportation services and congregate meals.

Suggestions heard at the meeting will be taken into consideration by the Office of Aging before finalization of the plan.

The plan must be presented to Gov. Christopher S. Bond for approval and will then go to the Administration on Aging, Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington.

This formal hearing hearing on the state plan should not be confused with "Seniors Speak Out", a series of meetings to be held by the Advocacy and Participation Committee of the Governor's Advisory Council on Aging.

"Seniors Speak Out" is the forum in which older Missourians are invited to express their ideas about the needs of senior citizens.

"Senior Speak Out" meetings will be held Frday in Kirksville, Monday in St. Louis and May 26 in Warrensburg. The first was held on Monday in Jefferson City.

Scott County Red Cross to sponsor blood program

The American Red Cross has become the principal source of blood collection in the world, through which volunteer donors provide blood and blood products that save the lives of sick and injured throughout the nation. The St. Louis Region of Red Cross supplies blood to 167 hospitals in a 200-mile radius, which amounted to 170,000 units last year.

Missouri Delta Community Hospital and Chaffee General Hospital Scott County's two hospitals-desire to obtain Red Cross blood, and the Scott County Red Cross Chapter has been concerned with the need for the county to participate in a Red Cross blood program.

Lennie Whitworth is chairman of the county chapter. Other members are: V. Allen Hubbard, Peggy Matthews, Claire Eisenbach Thatcher Scism, Billy C. Hanna, Don Hart, John Harper, Jim Woods, Paul Bumbarger, Dr. Dan Rosenstein, Jolene Walker, Jill Corti and Mary Jo Bass , all of Sikeston, and Glenda Brock of Charleston, ex-officio member.

Whitworth has announced that Thatcher Scism, retired president of the Sikeston Production Credit Association, has been designated to serve as chapter blood program chairman.

"It is a life saving procedure," Scism says. "Scott County participation in the voluntary program will permit citizens to receive blood under the Missouri-Illinois Red Cross blood program."

It is considered that 60 per cent of the population is eligile to give blood. This region must supply approximately 800 pints of blood per day. The Red Cross blood program is licensed by the federal government and maintains standards for biological products set by the Public Health Service.

All technical saspects of the blood center operations are supervised by physicians, who are assisted by nurses and qualified technologists. Much of the non-technical work is done by Red Cross volunteers.

All healthy persons, aged 17 through 65, are eligible to donate. The unit will make its first blood collection in Sikeston during the latter part of June. This is a volunteer program. Anyone desiring to volunteer to work on donor recruitment or other committee helpers may call the local Red Cross office in Sikeston, telephone number 471-1115, or a Red Cross officer.

Other blood donor centers during the year will be set up in the Chaffee, Illmo-Scott City and Oran-Benton-Morley areas. Dates and places will be announced later.

Some VA educational benefits have expired

ST. LOUIS— Many veterans returning to college or vocational trade schools during the summer or in the fall may be disappointed to learn that their Veterans Administration benefits for schooling have expired, according to Steve Savis, director of the St. Louis VA Regional Office.

Veterans released from active duty between Jan. 31, 1955, and May 31, 1966, will lose their eligibility to VA educational assistance for that type of schooling on May 31.

However, veterans released during this period may continue to use remaining entitlement for flight, farm cooperative, apprenticeship or on-the-job training until Aug. 30, 1977, which is 10 years after the effective date of amendatory legislation which added these programsto the original bill.

The Veterans Administration is advising veterans whose entitlement expires on or after May 31 to contact the Office of Education, Department of Health, Education and Welfare for alternative educational financial assistance. Through that agency, it may be possible for eligible persons to secure grants or insured loans to continuet their educational objective.

Veterans are also encouraged to contact the Financial Aid Office in their school for information regarding various scholarships, grants and awards available to them.

Veterans discharged after May 31, 1966, have 10 years from date of separation from active duty to use their entitlement to VA educational benefits, except as previously stated for flight, farm cooperataive, apprenticeship or on-the-job training programs. Veterans pursuing the latter programs have until Aug. 30, 1977, or 10 years from date of separation from duty, whichever is later.

For additional information, call your nearest VA office. A toll-free telephone numbers available for use of outstate Missourians is 1-800-392-3761.

Guardsmen participate in training exercise

POPLAR BLUFF–When 15 minutes equals an hour, time flies!

Just ask any of the 500 Missouri National Guardsmen who participated in a training exercise Saturday and Sunday at the Guard's Wappapello Training Site near here.

Involved in the two days of training were the headquarters and headquarters companies of the 35th Engineer Brigade, the 1138th Engineer Battalion and the 880th Engineer Battalion, all of St. Louis; and the 135th Engineer Group and the 1140th Engineer Battalion, both of Cape Girardeau.

The 35th Brigade, which ran the exercise, is commanded by Col. James R. Crites, whose promotion to brigader general is expected this summer. In civilian life, Col. Crites is a Cape Girardeau optometrist.

After motoring to the training site on Saturday morning, the Guardsmen began a tactical command post exercise which ran for 24 hours according to the clock--from noon Saturday through noon Sunday. But according to the training plan, the exercise scheduled to "play three days."

Eliminating six hours for sleep, this meant that each 15 minutes on the clock added up to an hour on the training schedule. And that, in turn, meant plenty of work for all individuals involved.

A command post exercise, a Guard spokesmen explained, is a test of the ability of staff sections to plan for the utilization of manuever units. A command post exercise which is "tactical" is one conducted in the field under simulated combat conditions.

So, wearing full combat paraphernalia, with tents serving as offices and lightweight folding tables resting on uneven ground serving as working space, the men of the various units were tested on their ability to plan, direct and coordinate both large and small tasks.

Some of the messages received and the action required was not much different from that which might be encountered by an Army unit on any post, such as:

–There was a simulated request from the Red Cross for an elisted man to be granted emergency leave. Orders had to be prepared and travel plans had to be arranged.

–Three weapons were supposedly missing. The proper headquarters had to be advised, an investigation had to be planned and a re-evaluation of weapons security in all units had to be initiated.

--There was a mock Congressional inquiry regarding an inadequate number of chaplains to support the units. Another investigation was called for, along with a plan to correct the situation.

But the command post exercise lconsisted largely of problems which the soliders would only encounter in a wartime theater of operations, including:

--One problem called for the renovation of an airfield, including a design site plan, a construction schedule and a man-hours estimate.

--Another required the staff officers to come up with a plan to take over the complete operation of the utilities of a large city for a 90-120 -day period.

--Still other problems called for plans to construct five substantial float bridges across a large river, to design civilian refugee camps and to monitor nuclear fallout.

The Guardsmen were even required to devise contingency plans to convert two of their engineer battalions to infantry battalions.

Added realism was brought to the exercise by 12 Army Reservists who belong to a Special Forces Detachement in St. Louis. These Green Berets, as they are known by the general public, attempted, as the aggressors, to penetrate the security of the various Guard units bivouaced at the Wappapello Training Site.

Acting both individually and in small groups, they tried to infiltrate the various commands by posing either as civilians or as U.S. military personnel. On several occasions they played the role of enemy patrols and openly attacked various command posts.

Perhaps the most realistic of their activities, however, was a chemical attack–actually tear gas --which the Special Forces troops carried out after nightfall Saturday.

Communities benefits from former Scouts

CAPE GIRARDEAU—Do you wonder why busy business and professional leaders, as well as parents and the public in general, take time out to spend time and money encouraging such activities as Boy Scouts of America?

Look upon the roster of the leaders of your community who help administer the Southeast Missouri Council of Boy Scouts of America, and you will identify the list as a sort of Who's Who in the region. The same is true in other Boy Scout areas.

It is good business to invest time and money in such programs. Want proof?

Scouting's alumni count in its ranks 65 per cent of Air Force Academy graduates, 68 per cent of West Point graduates, 70 per cent of Naval Academy graduates, 72 per cent of Rhodes scholars, 85 per cent of FBI agents and 26 of the first 29 astronauts.

Of student council presidents, 85 per cent were scouts; of Junior class presidents, 80 per cent were scouts; of school publication editors, 75 per cent were scouts; and of football captains, 71 per cent were scouts.

Obviously, the Boy Scout movement produces the leadership of tomorrow for America. Likewise, it produces the leadership of tomorrow for business and the professions. Why should business and professionial leaders not take time to encourage such an investment?

Former Marine now fights consumers' battles

By J.D. KIDD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — "Nice guys don't win wars." The Gothic-lettered sign hangs above the desk of Rep. Al Mueller, chairman of the House Consumer Protection Committee. The St. Louis Democrat, a former Marine platoon leader in Vietnam, borrowed the expression from a feisty lance corporal he served with at Khe San.

Mueller now leads another platoon, the maverick and independent committee that many representatives "are begging to get on."

Leading a group of 15 legislators is a much different experience from his Marine days, Mueller says. "This is an independent group. They don't fold to special interest pressures like some House members, and you can't force anything down their throats."

The group is young — only three are older than 40 — and well educated, with an average of one year of graduate work among the lawyers, retired executives and professionals on the committee.

There is a philosophical balance between liberal and conservative, and the committee has a healthy sprinkling of Republicans: five.

Rep. Stan Piekarski, D-St. Louis, lives in a predominately low income neighborhood that is a mixture of black and white. He was born less than 15 blocks from his current home.

"I'm known as a liberal, I guess," he says. "But on some things I'm conservative."

Piekarski voted against capital punishment, an unpopular decision among his constituents, but he supports mandatory sentences for felonies committed with a firearm, a conservative position.

Rep. George Hoblitzelle, Ladne Republican, is a former industrial executive, and represents the wealthiest district in Missouri. He is characterized as the "balancing force" on the committee.

"I'd rather not try to define my own role," he says. "Let others do that for you. I just try to make sure that we don't go too far on these consumer things. Otherwise, they will get torn apart on the floor."

In addition to the inner city Democrat, the suburban Republican and the former Marine, there are two former prosecutors for the attorney general's consumer protection division, Kansas City Republican Reps. Tom Coleman and Hal Lowenstein; two women, Reps. Mildred Huffman, R-Chesterfield, and Dotty Doll, D-Kansas City; and a sprinkling of urban Democrats.

The only segment of the state that is not represented in strength is rural Missouri. Only Rep. Jerry Drake, D-Grant City, is from outstate Missouri, although Rep. George Dames, D-O'Fallon, might be considered on the rural fringe.

Three persons who are not now committee members also might be considered key figures in the increased role the legislature has played in consumerism.

House Speaker Richard Rabbitt is described as the "catalyst" for consumerism, not only for beefing up the committee, but for choosing an independent membership and assigning important legislation to the committee.

After the 1972 session that saw seven bills assigned to the committee but none pass, Rabbitt added five members. Rep. James Mulvaney, a former milkman who is now a member of the Public Service Commission, was appointed chairman. In the first session under Mulvaney, the committee handled 27 bills, five of which became law.

In the following session, the committee handled 46 bills, four of which passed. And with the success of its first two sessions under Mulvaney, the consumer protection committee became a credible force in the House.

"Rabbitt told me that people were crying to get on the committee," Mulvaney says.

Among those who pushed consumerism was Harvey Tettlebuam, the chief counsel of the Attorney General's consumer protection division. Tettlebuam and Mulvaney worked together to draft legislation that the committee was to handle.

"Ours was a sort of partnership," Tettlebuam says. "We pushed through the odometer and housing solicitation sales laws, basically uncontroversial legislation. No one was against them."

But the committee also successfully handled a "holder-in-due-course" bill that was passed that year. The bill rewrote lending laws to protect consumers from third-party lieu holders, a piece of legislation that Rabbitt calls "the most significant consumer law ever passed in Missouri."

Mulvaney describes Rabbitt as the "unsung hero" of consumerism for having beefed up the committee and assigned it important legislation.

But Mulvaney says the individual members of the committee were as important as any one legislative leader, including himself.

Of the present members, he refers to the "balancing" effect of Hoblitzelle, the "honestly and forthrightness" of Lowenstein, and the "enthusiasm" of Piekarski.

"Stan's a good one for the committee. He gets excited and involved in the bills," Mulvaney says. "Take the auto repair bill, for example. If anyone bought a lemon, it had to be Stan. So he'd get enthusiastic."

Mulvaney's leadership and Piekarski's enthusiasm often would produce legislation that "went too far," Mulvaney says, "and the other members would tell me to back off. 'You can't tighten the screws down on industry like that,' they'd say."

While the committee has not dealt with industrial regulation as its main concern, a number of other measures have been passed during the past three sessions. Among these, holder-in-due-course frequently is mentioned as the most important.

The committee also handled the bills (new laws) that prohibit "pyramid sales" schemes and the arbitrary cancelation of automobile liability insurance, and another that protects the homebuilder from contract manipulations.

One of the most significant actions in this session has been the committee's rejection of a bill that would have allowed higher weight limits for trucks on Missouri's highways.

Lobbyist Langner says this bill almost certainly would have passed the House Transportation Committee had the speaker assigned it there.

"One of the most important features of the consumer protection committee is that it now handles bills that previously would have been assigned to special interest committees that are the private domain of industry," Langner says.

The trucking bill likely will be returned to the committee in some other form next session.

Members disagree about the direction that the committee will take in future sessions.

"We passed out the biggies in the first two sessions," Mulvaney says, "and left Al (Mueller) with the little ones."

But Mulvaney and Mueller may have to come to grips with a common concern: utilities. One of the focal points around which utilities regulation spins is the role of the public counsel, a separate office of the PSC that is supposed to represent the people in court when a PSC ruling is at issue.

Mueller points to the liklihood that his committee may see legislation to expand the staffing and role of the public counsel.

Mulvaney says the staff of about 180 is "available to the public counsel any time he wants to use them." But Piekarski says the PSC staff, possibly utility-oriented, may not be the proper place for utility rate research to be initiated on behalf of the consumer.

Hatfields and the McCoys meet again

HARDY, Ky. (AP) — Descendants of the feuding Hatfields and McCoys — including two who were alive at the time of the battles — gathered Saturday at a tangled, vine-covered cemetery beside Blackberry Creek and officially closed one of the bloodiest chapters in the nation's history.

About 300 persons stood in a steady downpour as a granite monument was dedicated at the McCoy family cemetery. Two ministers, one a Hatfield and the other a McCoy, called for "peace in the valley" as the two famous families formally buried the hatchet.

An inscription on the monument read: "Six of the 16 children of Randolph and Sarah McCoy lie buried here, having suffered untimely death. Three died bound to paw paw trees at the mouth of Blackberry Creek in August 1882."

The three, Tolbert, Pharmer and Randolph Jr., were killed by William Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield and several of his relatives in retaliation for the earlier murder of a Hatfield. Before the feud was finished, more than 100 men, women, and children had been killed or wounded, and the states of West Virginia and Kentucky were on the verge of open warfare.

The cause of the feud between the two clans was never clear. Some said it was over the theft of a McCoy hog by the Hatfields. Others said it stemmed from a grudge left by an incident during the Civil War, when the Hatfields fought for the South and the McCoys for the North.

A buffet luncheon followed the dedication. Two men who remember the feud cut the cake.

Willis Hatfield, 88, of nearby Logan, W.Va., said he had long since given up any ill feelings. "Some of those McCoys are pretty good fellows," said the last living son of Devil Anse.

Hatfield, who was only a youngster during most of the fighting, was standing beside "Grandpaw" Jim McCoy, 92, of Hardy. McCoy still lives near the old homeplace and says he well remembers the night in 1888 that the Hatfields burned down his family's log cabin home and killed two of his cousins.

"My daddy pulled me out of the cabin," he said. "All we were able to save were our nightclothes."

Like Hatfield, McCoy said he also bore no grudge. He said he soon forgave the Hatfields and even drank moonshine with Devil Anse a few years after the cabin burning.

"The Hatfields are my good friends," he added. "Just the other day a Hatfield boy brought me over three squirrels he had killed. Imagine that — a Hatfield doing that for a McCoy."

Former Marine now fights consumers' battles

By J.D. KIDD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — "Nice guys don't win wars." The Gothic-lettered sign hangs above the desk of Rep. Al Mueller, chairman of the House Consumer Protection Committee. The St. Louis Democrat, a former Marine platoon leader in Vietnam, borrowed the expression from a feisty lance corporal he served with at Khe San.

Mueller now leads another platoon, the maverick and independent committee that many representatives "are begging to get on."

Leading a group of 15 legislators is a much different experience from his Marine days, Mueller says. "This is an independent group. They don't fold to special interest pressures like some House members, and you can't force anything down their throats."

The group is young — only three are older than 40 — and well educated, with an average of one year of graduate work among the lawyers, retired executives and professionals on the committee.

There is a philosophical balance between liberal and conservative, and the committee has a healthy sprinkling of Republicans: five.

Rep. Stan Piekarski, D-St. Louis, lives in a predominately low income neighborhood that is a mixture of black and white. He was born less than 15 blocks from his current home.

"I'm known as a liberal, I guess," he says. "But on some things I'm conservative."

Piekarski voted against capital punishment, an unpopular decision among his constituents, but he supports mandatory sentences for felonies committed with a firearm, a conservative position.

Rep. George Hoblitzelle, Ladne Republican, is a former industrial executive, and represents the wealthiest district in Missouri. He is characterized as the "balancing force" on the committee.

"I'd rather not try to define my own role," he says. "Let others do that for you. I just try to make sure that we don't go too far on these consumer things. Otherwise, they will get torn apart on the floor."

In addition to the inner city Democrat, the suburban Republican and the former Marine, there are two former prosecutors for the attorney general's consumer protection division, Kansas City Republican Reps. Tom Coleman and Hal Lowenstein; two women, Reps. Mildred Huffman, R-Chesterfield, and Dotty Doll, D-Kansas City; and a sprinkling of urban Democrats.

The only segment of the state that is not represented in strength is rural Missouri. Only Rep. Jerry Drake, D-Grant City, is from outstate Missouri, although Rep. George Dames, D-O'Fallon, might be considered on the rural fringe.

Three persons who are not now committee members also might be considered key figures in the increased role the legislature has played in consumerism.

House Speaker Richard Rabbitt is described as the "catalyst" for consumerism, not only for beefing up the committee, but for choosing an independent membership and assigning important legislation to the committee.

After the 1972 session that saw seven bills assigned to the committee but none pass, Rabbitt added five members. Rep. James Mulvaney, a former milkman who is now a member of the Public Service Commission, was appointed chairman. In the first session under Mulvaney, the committee handled 27 bills, five of which became law.

In the following session, the committee handled 46 bills, four of which passed. And with the success of its first two sessions under Mulvaney, the consumer protection committee became a credible force in the House.

"Rabbitt told me that people were crying to get on the committee," Mulvaney says.

Among those who pushed consumerism was Harvey Tettlebuam, the chief counsel of the Attorney General's consumer protection division. Tettlebuam and Mulvaney worked together to draft legislation that the committee was to handle.

"Ours was a sort of partnership," Tettlebuam says. "We pushed through the odometer and housing solicitation sales laws, basically uncontroversial legislation. No one was against them."

But the committee also successfully handled a "holder-in-due-course" bill that was passed that year. The bill rewrote lending laws to protect consumers from third-party lieu holders, a piece of legislation that Rabbitt calls "the most significant consumer law ever passed in Missouri."

Mulvaney describes Rabbitt as the "unsung hero" of consumerism for having beefed up the committee and assigned it important legislation.

But Mulvaney says the individual members of the committee were as important as any one legislative leader, including himself.

Of the present members, he refers to the "balancing" effect of Hoblitzelle, the "honestly and forthrightness" of Lowenstein, and the "enthusiasm" of Piekarski.

"Stan's a good one for the committee. He gets excited and involved in the bills," Mulvaney says. "Take the auto repair bill, for example. If anyone bought a lemon, it had to be Stan. So he'd get enthusiastic."

Mulvaney's leadership and Piekarski's enthusiasm often would produce legislation that "went too far," Mulvaney says, "and the other members would tell me to back off. 'You can't tighten the screws down on industry like that,' they'd say."

While the committee has not dealt with industrial regulation as its main concern, a number of other measures have been passed during the past three sessions. Among these, holder-in-due-course frequently is mentioned as the most important.

The committee also handled the bills (new laws) that prohibit "pyramid sales" schemes and the arbitrary cancelation of automobile liability insurance, and another that protects the homebuilder from contract manipulations.

One of the most significant actions in this session has been the committee's rejection of a bill that would have allowed higher weight limits for trucks on Missouri's highways.

Lobbyist Langner says this bill almost certainly would have passed the House Transportation Committee had the speaker assigned it there.

"One of the most important features of the consumer protection committee is that it now handles bills that previously would have been assigned to special interest committees that are the private domain of industry," Langner says.

The trucking bill likely will be returned to the committee in some other form next session.

Members disagree about the direction that the committee will take in future sessions.

"We passed out the biggies in the first two sessions," Mulvaney says, "and left Al (Mueller) with the little ones."

But Mulvaney and Mueller may have to come to grips with a common concern: utilities. One of the focal points around which utilities regulation spins is the role of the public counsel, a separate office of the PSC that is supposed to represent the people in court when a PSC ruling is at issue.

Mueller points to the liklihood that his committee may see legislation to expand the staffing and role of the public counsel.

Mulvaney says the staff of about 180 is "available to the public counsel any time he wants to use them." But Piekarski says the PSC staff, possibly utility-oriented, may not be the proper place for utility rate research to be initiated on behalf of the consumer.

Hatfields and the McCoys meet again

HARDY, Ky. (AP) — Descendants of the feuding Hatfields and McCoys — including two who were alive at the time of the battles — gathered Saturday at a tangled, vine-covered cemetery beside Blackberry Creek and officially closed one of the bloodiest chapters in the nation's history.

About 300 persons stood in a steady downpour as a granite monument was dedicated at the McCoy family cemetery. Two ministers, one a Hatfield and the other a McCoy, called for "peace in the valley" as the two famous families formally buried the hatchet.

An inscription on the monument read: "Six of the 16 children of Randolph and Sarah McCoy lie buried here, having suffered untimely death. Three died bound to paw paw trees at the mouth of Blackberry Creek in August 1882."

The three, Tolbert, Pharmer and Randolph Jr., were killed by William Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield and several of his relatives in retaliation for the earlier murder of a Hatfield. Before the feud was finished, more than 100 men, women, and children had been killed or wounded, and the states of West Virginia and Kentucky were on the verge of open warfare.

The cause of the feud between the two clans was never clear. Some said it was over the theft of a McCoy hog by the Hatfields. Others said it stemmed from a grudge left by an incident during the Civil War, when the Hatfields fought for the South and the McCoys for the North.

A buffet luncheon followed the dedication. Two men who remember the feud cut the cake.

Willis Hatfield, 88, of nearby Logan, W.Va., said he had long since given up any ill feelings. "Some of those McCoys are pretty good fellows," said the last living son of Devil Anse.

Hatfield, who was only a youngster during most of the fighting, was standing beside "Grandpaw" Jim McCoy, 92, of Hardy. McCoy still lives near the old homeplace and says he well remembers the night in 1888 that the Hatfields burned down his family's log cabin home and killed two of his cousins.

"My daddy pulled me out of the cabin," he said. "All we were able to save were our nightclothes."

Like Hatfield, McCoy said he also bore no grudge. He said he soon forgave the Hatfields and even drank moonshine with Devil Anse a few years after the cabin burning.

"The Hatfields are my good friends," he added. "Just the other day a Hatfield boy brought me over three squirrels he had killed. Imagine that — a Hatfield doing that for a McCoy."

Prison inmate convicted in stabbing incident

CALIFORNIA, Mo. (AP) — Prison inmate Kathy Webb, accused of seriously stabbing the women's Correctional Center superintendent last fall, has been convicted of a reduced assault charge in connection with the incident.

A jury of 10 men and two women returned the verdict late Tuesday after more than two hours of deliberation, rejecting Prosecutor Clarence Hawk's request for a verdict of malicious assault with intent to kill, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

The verdict was assualt with intent to kill without malice, a crime punishable by a maximum sentence of five years.

Miss Webb, 34, who began serving a 25-year term for robbery at the Tipton facility a year ago, was charged with stabbing Carolyn Atkins, 45, at least nine times with a nine-ince kitchen knife as the prison superintendent enetered her home across from the prison on Sept. 18.

Mrs. Atkins, who was transferred to a central administrative post after returning to work in March, was present in Moniteau County Circut Court when the verdict on the lesser charge was returned, but she showed no emotion. She remains under doctor's care for the wounds, four of which were said to be commonly regarded as fatal.

Along with two other prosecution witnesses, Mrs. Atkins identified Miss Webb as the masked assailant. Miss Webb sat through most of the trial expressionless, smiling once along with others in the courtroom when a juror's chair broke and he almost fell backwards.

The two-day trial before judge Dean Whipple came to an abrupt halt Tuesday afternoon when defense attorney A. Gary Schmidt rested his case without presentation of any evidence or witnesses.

During closing arguments to the jury, Hawk contended the fact that Miss Webb obtained the knife from the Atkins' kitchen and pulled a black nylon stocking over her head was sufficient proof that she thought about the assault before it occurred.

"If that isn't taking some thought before hand, then I submit to you there is no thought to it at all," the prosecutor said.

But Schmidt, while acknowledging that there had been a "great deal of evidence" introduced to prove that Miss Webb committed the assault and intended to kill Mrs. Atkins, claimed the prosecution case proving premediatation and malice was weak.

He stressed what he termed a riot that occurred among the inmates after the stabbing and claimed that development had "embarassed" correction officials.

Kissinger wants new order at Kenya trade gathering

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger called Tuesday night for a new international economic order as nearly 3,000 delegates gathered in Kenya's capital for a global meeting on trade and aid.

Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta and United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim were the feature speakers for the opening session today of the fourth U. N. Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD).

Kissinger told a dinner meeting of key delegates the United States would cooperate in solving disputes between the rich and poor nations. But he warned once more that the Ford administration will resist sweeping proposals to stabilize raw material prices.

Kissinger, in a reference to the oil squeeze of late 1973, warned that "attempts to wield bloc economic power disrupt the entire system and ultimately rebound to the detriment of all."

Kissinger speaks to the conference Thursday. U.S. officials say he will propose creation of a multi-billion-dollar international resources bank to channel private investment funds to developing countries.

UNCTAD Secretary-General Gamani Corea of Sri Lanka has proposed a $6 billion fund to regulate the prices of 10 key primary commodities by buying when the price is low and selling when it gets too high. The Ford administration has opposed the idea, arguing that price problems of each commodity market must be solved separately.

The United States and other industrial countries also reject as inflationary proposals to tie the prices of key primary commodities the Third World sells to the prices they pay for imports from the industrial countries.

Expectations are that the month-long meeting will turn out to be another inconclusive wrangle by the 153 member nations over old problems of trade and aid.

"There's conflict on almost every agenda item. There are East-West conflicts and North-South conflicts. The UNCTAD environment is that of a contest, not a community of nations," said U.S. delegate Roger Hansen of the Overseas Development Council.

Major issues, in addition to commodity prices, include how to encourage manufacturing in poor nations and spread technological skills now concentrated in industrial nations, how to relieve debts burdening the world's poorest nations and how to regulate multinational corporations.

New strategy used against Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Security Council is shaping a long-range "Maritime Strategy" that could employ land-based Air Force bombers to bottle up Soviet warships in their home bases.

Planners are also thinking of drawing on land-based U.S. tactical fighters operating from friendly ocean-area bases to block Russia's new missile-firing Backfire Bombers from reaching American fleet units at sea.

Adm. James L. Holloway, chief of naval operations, gave glimmerings of this from a still secret, still incomplete strategy study during a Tuesday briefing.

The briefing was arranged to explain the Ford administration's request for a $1.2-billion increase in next year's shipbuilding budget to provide an additional five warships, including four missile-armed frigates and a down-payment on a new $2-billion super aircraft carrier.

This is but the first installment of an expected five-year shipbuilding program planned by the NSC as part of a strategy to counter increasingly sophisticated Soviet naval power and naval-related air and missile forces in the latter part of this century.

Holloway indicated the Navy feels the present fleet of 477 ships, smallest since before Pearl Harbor, should be built up to about 600 ships. But he said the ultimate level will be determined by the NSC strategy study and President Ford's subsequent decisions.

"To develop a long range, comprehensive plan ... undoubtedly requires a great deal more than just shipbuilding," Holloway said. "It has to look at the contributions of the Air Force, it has to look at the contributions of our allies."

Holloway suggested that land-based Air Force tactical fighters might play a major role in intercepting Backfire bombers hundreds of miles before the Soviet missile-firing bombers come within range of American naval task force, convoys or amphibious groups.

"We are also looking at land-based bombardment aircraft to be employed, both in delivery of mines to block exits in Soviet main-base sortie areas as well as to make strikes on their naval bases," Holloway said.

Artists To Work On Positive Side Of Old Age

CLEVELAND (AP) — The nation's artists, writers and other humanists are hoping to clean up the image of the "dirty old man," in keeping with the increasing numbers of the elderly.

The start came about mid-November with a symposium at Case Western Reserve University directed by history professor David Van Tassel.

Van Tassel says social sciences have been concerned with problems of aging for years but that the arts and humanities hadn't dealt with the subject.

The symposium of 40 scholars, artists and writers from across the nation produced a variety of reports designed to focus attention on the image of old age as a time of senility, decline, weakness and obsolescence — and sometimes to dispute that image.

At least one argued that old age is "a stimulus to achievement."

Van Tassel says that research in philosophy, art and literature could help redefine aging and remove some of its long-standing negative imagery in favor of "new insights."

A second meeting was planned for New York in what will be a 2½-year project. The results of the Cleveland meeting will be published in book form in 1976.

The Nashville Sound

Songwriter portrays Hank Williams

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The old man guided his grandchildren to the front of the theater and told them, "I want you to study this. This is the way Hank Williams really was."

In Akron, Ohio, the man was reliving the legend of Hank Williams through a one-man road show, "Hank," 90-minutes of songs and dialogue by Nashville songwriter Jim Owen.

Throughout 16 Williams' songs interspersed with an additional hour of dialogue, Owen looks, sings, speaks and dresses like Williams. Veteran country music personalities who knew Williams well say the resemblance is uncanny.

"A hobby became a vocation," said Owen, 35, who never met Williams but saw him perform once in person. "I spent 23 years doing research about his life, and somehow it turned into this.

"The idea came from a dream my wife had. She dreamed I was at the Grand Ole Opry singing in Hank's voice. It never left my mind.

"I was such a fan of his, I had absorbed a lot of his mannerisms. When I started doing the show, I used to 'act.' But now it just comes natural.

"My voice is deeper than his, but now that I've been imitating his voice it's no problem now."

He made an outfit especially for the show, copying it from one Williams owned.

The Williams legend keeps growing because his life was public and his songs related so well to the people, Owen said.

"Because of his songs, people felt they knew him. People were aware of his drinking, his marital problems and the trouble he had with the Opry.

"People thought his songs were about them. He was personal; he related. Then, when he should have been on top of the world, he was dead. People thought they had lost a member of the family.

"After the show, we do 30 minutes of questions and answers. This is so the people won't go home depressed. The tears that come from the audience are unbelievable."

Owen, who wrote "Louisiana Woman, Mississippi Man" for Conway Twitty and Loretta Lynn and "Southern Living" and "Broad-Minded Man" for Jim Ed Brown, recalled that he cried, too, when he was 11 years old and heard that Williams had died.

"He and Ted Williams of the Red Sox were what I lived for. It was too much for me to believe."

He hopes to be chosen to portray Williams in a movie about his life. "Your Cheatin' Heart," starring George Hamilton, has already been done about Williams, but Owen said it was riddled with inaccuracies.

"The movie was right about two things — that he lived and died. George Hamilton is a good actor, but he just wasn't Hank Williams."

Nationwide prison survey results given

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri ranks 49th in a nationwide survey on the amount of state funds spent to keep prison inmates, the Division of Corrections reported Monday.

The division recently received the survey results, which showed that the cost of incarcerating an inmate within the state corrections system was $8.87 per day. The high ranged from $38.82 for Minnesota to the low of $7.30 for Alabama.

The survey was compiled by the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections and covered all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

In addition to Alabama, the other state behind Missouri was Arkansas, which was spending $8.50 per day on each of its prisoners.

FEA's perpetual motion machinery

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — When the Federal Energy Administration was created in 1973 it was with the implication that it was to be a temporary bother. Temporary, ho. Like pestilence in Pakistan it's temporary. Once an agency takes life in this town it forms a root of its own, and is harder to remove than soot from a suede jacket.

Conceivably, the bureaucracy could die this summer. According to the Federal Energy Administration Act of 1974 it would expire June 30 if Congress refused to renew its authority. But those who see this happening are in league with the tooth fairy. In Washington such good sense is always a thing of the remote future. The FEA seems securely preserved in the juices of questionable national need.

The original need for FEA was not questionable. The Arab oil embargo of three years ago necessitated a quick federal response so that the Great American engine would not conk out. But when the emergency faded, FEA did not. Instead it simply redefined the emergency and convinced the Congress of its further indispensability. It thus became an aggressive example of a bureaucracy expanding under its own enterprise to fill a void of its own interpretation.

Give it credit for gumption and chutzpah, though. FEA has in a short time damn near frightened everyone into thinking it stands between us and frostbite. And our gratitude is beginning to look boundless. From its small, hasty beginning, the FEA has been allowing to become one of the most overstaffed, overpaid, overbearing agencies in Washington.

By its own reckoning, the energy office has grown from zero to 3,400 employes in 30 months, an average of 25 new people every week. And what people. There doesn't seem to be a drone in the army. Such is the qualification level, according to The Wall Street Journal, that the mean FEA salary ($19,000) is the best in the government. Thirty-seven of the indispensables earn $37,000 or more annually. The story is the stock room boys wear shoes by Gucci.

And what do they all do for such lush rewards? According to critics in the office of Rep. Pat Schroeder (D-Colo.) they spend a great deal of time keeping tabs on every single gas station in the republic. If a dealer in Painted Post, Alaska, raises the prince of regular a penny, an FEA snoop leaps from behind the pumps to warn him that only FEA workers are permitted to profit commercially.

And then there is Energy Ant. You have not heard of Energy Ant? It is the FEA's Smokey Bear, but ever so much less likeable. The ant is to remind us to squirrel away what energy we can. Better they should use Energy Squirrel, actually. The ant is ugly. A beetle would have been no worse. A roach? In any event the ant, sigh, has been a principal project for FEA's 3,400 wealthy personnel.

I oversimplify here. The FEA has engaged in several serious and worthwhile responsibilities. (Never mind that one was the "Project Independence" study of some months ago that the FEA now admits was ignorant in its naivete and optimism.) But what is the need of listing the important jobs here? FEA is ever ready and alert to toot its own horn. For this purpose it has hired more than 100 publicity specialists who turn out about 60 press releases a month to tell of the agency's good, faithful, vital work.

The publicists have not convinced everyone of the vital work. Former FEA chief William Simon says the agency has become "a monster." Ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally says he wishes he directed the agency, because then he could disband it. Conservationists do not trust it, and its attempts to befriend big oil have more or less backfired. In Congress, Pat Schroeder calls it the "quintessential bloated bureaucracy," and Floyd Fithian (D-Ind.) hopes it soon "goes the way of the five-cent Coke."

Yet FEA has one good friend. That dedicated enemy of big government, Jerry Ford. Though Ford tells the faithful at campaign stops he is cutting government wherever possible, here in Washington he has asked Congress to increase FEA's budget from $140 to $440 million. You're right, this isn't cricket — but it's a whole lot of Energy Ants.

Washington report

Senate passes grain inspection bill

By
STUART SYMINGTON
U.S. Senator
Missouri

WASHINGTON, D.C.-During the past year, we have witnessed a series of alarming scandals involving this nation's grain exporting system.

More than 60 individuals and three of the world's largest grain firms have been handed criminal indictments on charges of theft and misgrading of grain bound for foreign markets.

In addition, foreign buyers have complained that the American grain they receive is often low in protein, has been damaged in shipment or contains excessive amounts of foreign matter, gravel and mold.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office has concluded that many of the inadequacies of our exporting system are attributable to weaknesses which exist in the national grain inspection regulations authorized by the U.S. Grain Standards Act.

While most inspection services have been satisfactory and most grain dealers honest in their sales, the hodge-podge of over 100 state and private agencies and trade associations which currently inspect grain exports have made any uniform system of inspection virtually impossible.

In effort to correct inadequacies in the system, the Senate recently passed the Grain Inspection Bill by a vote of 52-18. The bill, as passed by the Senate, would establish a Federal Grain Inspection Agency to institute an all-federal system of inspection at export points and larger inland terminals.

The legislation would also provide new civil and criminal penalties for violations, eliminate actual and potential conflicts of interest and require large grain companies to provide basic information on their ownership and operations.

An amendment I supported, which would have excluded inland terminals such as Kansas City and St. Louis from Federal inspection, was narrowly defeated by a 38-36 vote.

The bill will now go to a conference committee where differences between the Senate and House versions will be ironed out.

Action is urgently needed if we are to restore confidence in this nation's grain inspection system and to interests of both buyers and sellers.

I believe the changes proposed in the Grain Inspection Bill will do much to rebuild that confidence and ensure that the qualty and consistency of exported American grain is the finest in the world.

Too many welfare errors

45 states may lose matching funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-five states face the loss of $123.4 million in federal matching funds this fall because they have failed to meet a goal for reducing errors in the nation's major family welfare program, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says.

HEW says its four-year campaign to weed out ineligible and overpaid recipients from welfare rolls has saved federal and state taxpayers an estimated $950 million.

But HEW officials told Congress on Monday that only five states met the federal goal of reducing errors in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program by the end of last year. The other 45 states and the District of Columbia failed to reach the goal and are scheduled to lose $123.4 million in federal matching funds.

William A. Morrill, HEW's assistant secretary for planning and evaluation, said the proposed penalties are being discussed in a series of meetings between HEW and state officials.

There has been widespread speculation that HEW will not proceed with its plans to levy penalties next Oct. 1 and Jan. 1.

Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, chairman of the House ways and means oversight subcommittee, told the HEW officials that "your error reduction programs are not working. We are meeting today because you continue to claim enormous savings in your quality control program, yet evidence has been presented that the savings are grossly exaggerated and perhaps even nonexistent."

Morrill said AFDC error rates have dropped to 26 per cent from 41 per cent in 1972 when the so-called quality control program began.

Misspending fell from 16 cents of every dollar to 10 cents and the program has cut about 325,000 ineligible persons from AFDC rolls and corrected 289,000 overpayments and 113,000 underpayments, he said.

Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma and South Dakota achieved the federal goals of reducing errors to 3 per cent ineligible, 5 per cent overpaid and 5 per cent underpaid, he said.

Under the current schedule, penalties against states will be imposed this fall, HEW officials said.

Those facing penalties of more than $1 million are New York, almost $32 million; Illinois, $16.4 million; Pennsylvania, $11.9 million; Michigan, $11.5 million; Ohio, $8.7 million; Massachusetts, $7.9 million; California, $5.8 million; Georgia, $5.6 million; District of Columbia, $3 million; Maryland, $2.5 million; Kentucky, $1.2 million; Maine, $1.7 million; Missouri, $1.8 million; New Jersey, $1.6 million; and Virginia, $1.3 million.

Easter Seal donations lower than expected

CAPE GIRARDEAU--The Easter Seal Campaign in Southeast Missouri reached $19,084 at the end of April, according to Mrs. Rebecca Andrews, of Cape Girardeau, director of the Missouri Easter Seal Society's 23-county Southeast Region.

Campaign contributions statewide totaled $279,228.

Most of the funds received in this area of the state, Mrs. Andrews said, have been from mail appeal, $16,022, and special events or promotions, $3,062.

"At this point, we're very concerned," Mrs. Andrews said, "because we're about $7,000 behind last year's final campaign total. And 1975 was not a good year of fund raising for most organizations.

"Faced with declining income and rising costs, we were forced to curtail our special assistance services to disabled individuals last year."

Mrs. Andrews said that with the economy improving, the Society had been anticipating increased support from the public, but so far this has not been the case.

Donations are urgently needed and will be credited to this year's campaign up to the cutoff date, June 1, according to Mrs. Andrews. They may be mailed to Easter Seal Society, 316 S. Plaza Way, Cape Girardeau, Mo. 63701.

FEA's perpetual motion machinery

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — When the Federal Energy Administration was created in 1973 it was with the implication that it was to be a temporary bother. Temporary, ho. Like pestilence in Pakistan it's temporary. Once an agency takes life in this town it forms a root of its own, and is harder to remove than soot from a suede jacket.

Conceivably, the bureaucracy could die this summer. According to the Federal Energy Administration Act of 1974 it would expire June 30 if Congress refused to renew its authority. But those who see this happening are in league with the tooth fairy. In Washington such good sense is always a thing of the remote future. The FEA seems securely preserved in the juices of questionable national need.

The original need for FEA was not questionable. The Arab oil embargo of three years ago necessitated a quick federal response so that the Great American engine would not conk out. But when the emergency faded, FEA did not. Instead it simply redefined the emergency and convinced the Congress of its further indispensability. It thus became an aggressive example of a bureaucracy expanding under its own enterprise to fill a void of its own interpretation.

Give it credit for gumption and chutzpah, though. FEA has in a short time damn near frightened everyone into thinking it stands between us and frostbite. And our gratitude is beginning to look boundless. From its small, hasty beginning, the FEA has been allowing to become one of the most overstaffed, overpaid, overbearing agencies in Washington.

By its own reckoning, the energy office has grown from zero to 3,400 employes in 30 months, an average of 25 new people every week. And what people. There doesn't seem to be a drone in the army. Such is the qualification level, according to The Wall Street Journal, that the mean FEA salary ($19,000) is the best in the government. Thirty-seven of the indispensables earn $37,000 or more annually. The story is the stock room boys wear shoes by Gucci.

And what do they all do for such lush rewards? According to critics in the office of Rep. Pat Schroeder (D-Colo.) they spend a great deal of time keeping tabs on every single gas station in the republic. If a dealer in Painted Post, Alaska, raises the prince of regular a penny, an FEA snoop leaps from behind the pumps to warn him that only FEA workers are permitted to profit commercially.

And then there is Energy Ant. You have not heard of Energy Ant? It is the FEA's Smokey Bear, but ever so much less likeable. The ant is to remind us to squirrel away what energy we can. Better they should use Energy Squirrel, actually. The ant is ugly. A beetle would have been no worse. A roach? In any event the ant, sigh, has been a principal project for FEA's 3,400 wealthy personnel.

I oversimplify here. The FEA has engaged in several serious and worthwhile responsibilities. (Never mind that one was the "Project Independence" study of some months ago that the FEA now admits was ignorant in its naivete and optimism.) But what is the need of listing the important jobs here? FEA is ever ready and alert to toot its own horn. For this purpose it has hired more than 100 publicity specialists who turn out about 60 press releases a month to tell of the agency's good, faithful, vital work.

The publicists have not convinced everyone of the vital work. Former FEA chief William Simon says the agency has become "a monster." Ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally says he wishes he directed the agency, because then he could disband it. Conservationists do not trust it, and its attempts to befriend big oil have more or less backfired. In Congress, Pat Schroeder calls it the "quintessential bloated bureaucracy," and Floyd Fithian (D-Ind.) hopes it soon "goes the way of the five-cent Coke."

Yet FEA has one good friend. That dedicated enemy of big government, Jerry Ford. Though Ford tells the faithful at campaign stops he is cutting government wherever possible, here in Washington he has asked Congress to increase FEA's budget from $140 to $440 million. You're right, this isn't cricket — but it's a whole lot of Energy Ants.

Washington report

Senate passes grain inspection bill

By
STUART SYMINGTON
U.S. Senator
Missouri

WASHINGTON, D.C.-During the past year, we have witnessed a series of alarming scandals involving this nation's grain exporting system.

More than 60 individuals and three of the world's largest grain firms have been handed criminal indictments on charges of theft and misgrading of grain bound for foreign markets.

In addition, foreign buyers have complained that the American grain they receive is often low in protein, has been damaged in shipment or contains excessive amounts of foreign matter, gravel and mold.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office has concluded that many of the inadequacies of our exporting system are attributable to weaknesses which exist in the national grain inspection regulations authorized by the U.S. Grain Standards Act.

While most inspection services have been satisfactory and most grain dealers honest in their sales, the hodge-podge of over 100 state and private agencies and trade associations which currently inspect grain exports have made any uniform system of inspection virtually impossible.

In effort to correct inadequacies in the system, the Senate recently passed the Grain Inspection Bill by a vote of 52-18. The bill, as passed by the Senate, would establish a Federal Grain Inspection Agency to institute an all-federal system of inspection at export points and larger inland terminals.

The legislation would also provide new civil and criminal penalties for violations, eliminate actual and potential conflicts of interest and require large grain companies to provide basic information on their ownership and operations.

An amendment I supported, which would have excluded inland terminals such as Kansas City and St. Louis from Federal inspection, was narrowly defeated by a 38-36 vote.

The bill will now go to a conference committee where differences between the Senate and House versions will be ironed out.

Action is urgently needed if we are to restore confidence in this nation's grain inspection system and to interests of both buyers and sellers.

I believe the changes proposed in the Grain Inspection Bill will do much to rebuild that confidence and ensure that the qualty and consistency of exported American grain is the finest in the world.

Too many welfare errors

45 states may lose matching funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-five states face the loss of $123.4 million in federal matching funds this fall because they have failed to meet a goal for reducing errors in the nation's major family welfare program, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says.

HEW says its four-year campaign to weed out ineligible and overpaid recipients from welfare rolls has saved federal and state taxpayers an estimated $950 million.

But HEW officials told Congress on Monday that only five states met the federal goal of reducing errors in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program by the end of last year. The other 45 states and the District of Columbia failed to reach the goal and are scheduled to lose $123.4 million in federal matching funds.

William A. Morrill, HEW's assistant secretary for planning and evaluation, said the proposed penalties are being discussed in a series of meetings between HEW and state officials.

There has been widespread speculation that HEW will not proceed with its plans to levy penalties next Oct. 1 and Jan. 1.

Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, chairman of the House ways and means oversight subcommittee, told the HEW officials that "your error reduction programs are not working. We are meeting today because you continue to claim enormous savings in your quality control program, yet evidence has been presented that the savings are grossly exaggerated and perhaps even nonexistent."

Morrill said AFDC error rates have dropped to 26 per cent from 41 per cent in 1972 when the so-called quality control program began.

Misspending fell from 16 cents of every dollar to 10 cents and the program has cut about 325,000 ineligible persons from AFDC rolls and corrected 289,000 overpayments and 113,000 underpayments, he said.

Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma and South Dakota achieved the federal goals of reducing errors to 3 per cent ineligible, 5 per cent overpaid and 5 per cent underpaid, he said.

Under the current schedule, penalties against states will be imposed this fall, HEW officials said.

Those facing penalties of more than $1 million are New York, almost $32 million; Illinois, $16.4 million; Pennsylvania, $11.9 million; Michigan, $11.5 million; Ohio, $8.7 million; Massachusetts, $7.9 million; California, $5.8 million; Georgia, $5.6 million; District of Columbia, $3 million; Maryland, $2.5 million; Kentucky, $1.2 million; Maine, $1.7 million; Missouri, $1.8 million; New Jersey, $1.6 million; and Virginia, $1.3 million.

Easter Seal donations lower than expected

CAPE GIRARDEAU--The Easter Seal Campaign in Southeast Missouri reached $19,084 at the end of April, according to Mrs. Rebecca Andrews, of Cape Girardeau, director of the Missouri Easter Seal Society's 23-county Southeast Region.

Campaign contributions statewide totaled $279,228.

Most of the funds received in this area of the state, Mrs. Andrews said, have been from mail appeal, $16,022, and special events or promotions, $3,062.

"At this point, we're very concerned," Mrs. Andrews said, "because we're about $7,000 behind last year's final campaign total. And 1975 was not a good year of fund raising for most organizations.

"Faced with declining income and rising costs, we were forced to curtail our special assistance services to disabled individuals last year."

Mrs. Andrews said that with the economy improving, the Society had been anticipating increased support from the public, but so far this has not been the case.

Donations are urgently needed and will be credited to this year's campaign up to the cutoff date, June 1, according to Mrs. Andrews. They may be mailed to Easter Seal Society, 316 S. Plaza Way, Cape Girardeau, Mo. 63701.

Grain sales could boost food prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz says there is plenty of grain on hand to sell more to the Soviet Union and other countries. But a report prepared for Congress says that if much more is sold this season, consumers will see a significant rise in food prices.

The Russians have bought 16.2 million metric tons of corn and wheat from the 1975 U.S. crop and may want more to tide them over until a new five-year agreement takes effect, with deliveries beginning Oct. 1. Butz said Monday there is "a likely prospect" more will be sold.

Butz also predicted that retail food prices will go up only 3 to 4 per cent this year, regardless of the Russian grain sales. That would be less than one-half the 8.5 per cent gain of 1975 and far below the jumps of 14.5 per cent in each of the two previous years. According to USDA records, a food-price increase of 3 to 4 per cent would be the smallest since a gain of 3 per cent in 1971.

Total grain exports, including wheat, corn and other feed grains are expected to be a record of about 80 million tons in the 1975-76 season. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

The Congressional Budget Office said in a report Monday that if grain exports were increased by 10 million tons from previous expectations — about 13 per cent from what USDA has been saying—consumers might see a 1 per cent boost in food prices within a year, meaning an increase on top of what might otherwise occur.

"Consumers would have to pay higher food prices, yet they would also benefit from improved accessibility to foreign products," the report said. "Farmers who raise crops would benefit from higher incomes, while the incomes of those raising livestock would eventually fall."

But the reports said, "There is no attempt to conclude whether an increase in grain exports to the Soviet Union or to other countries is on balance 'good' or 'bad.'"

Even counting the new agreement, which calls for Russia to buy six million to eight million tons of corn and wheat annually and more if the two countries agree, the department says tentatively that grain exports are likely to decline next season.

St. Francis first to benefit from new program

JEFFERSON CITY— St. Francois County will be the first county in Missouri to benefit from $4.9 million appropriated to Missouri counties under the Federal Aid Highway Amendments of 1974, designated the "off-system roads program."

St. Francois County's singular distinction will be achieved at the May 28 bid letting, when bids for some 2.4 miles of highway resurfacing on old Route 67 from Desloge northwesterly will be received. The letting will take place in the Missouri State Highway Commission hearing room in Jefferson City and it is anticipated that award of contract will be made to the lowest responsible bidder.

Responsibility for administering the $4.9 million was given to the Missouri State Highway Department. Selection of the projects rests with the individual counties with the Highway Department offering assisstance in whatever aspects of design, planning, bidding, and construction supervision the counties request.

Congress aimed the $4.9 million expenditure at "rural" area highways not now on the Missouri Highway System, and locted outside of urban or urbanized areas.

Each county in Missouri received a fund apportionment under the program, based on the county's land area and population, and the amount of off-system road mileage maintained. Highway Department administered funds may cover up to 70 per cent of a project's cost (up to the county total allotment), with the county itself making up the remainder.

While St. Francois is the first county's project to reach contract stage other counties are expected to participate in the off-highway improvement program.

Cross purposes botch production

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The setting was a small, select meeting of bureaucrats, academic researchers and businessmen wrestling with the problem of government regulation and its cost in dollars and in inhibiting industrial production.

Those present were especially disturbed at what they saw as a growing reluctance of American businessmen to venture into new fields and advanced products at the pace necessary to keep our economic heads above the water. It's become more practical, they agreed, to meet rising costs by streamlining production methods.

The feeling was strong that our slowness in adopting new ideas would make it impossible to hold our own with foreign competition or to absorb millions of unemployed.

Then an academician spoke up. The problem is not that the regulators are wrong, or that businessmen are; the problem is that if you get regulators together, they look for perfection, naturally — no pollution, no accidents, no industrial dangers, no faulty products, no possible slipups.

If you get businessmen together, they, naturally, see what these regulations costs their businesses, how they cramp their ability to expand or to hold prices down. They note there has not been sufficient research to prove many of the dangers or that regulations would cure the problems — except at the cost of killing the patient.

There is no wrong or right involved here, he said. There are only different and valid objectives which conflict and call for the same sort of negotiations as between labor unions and management.

But we insist on getting into little boxes, the regulators in one group with their attorneys, the businessmen in a group by themselves and the academic types in an upstairs room. We have medical committees who see pollution only as a medical problem, legal committees who see it only as a problem of enforcement, environmentalists who see it only as a problem of protecting the environment and businessmen who see many of the regulations only as something hampering production.

We sit and fight in absolutes when we should be talking about some way to adjust between legitimate points of view. Our continual bickering and our failure to talk to each other reasonably is hurting everyone concerned — the businessmen, the consumer, the environmentalist, the worker and all other citizens who want both jobs and reasonable prices along with a cleaner, safer environment.

The problem is one often mentioned when scientists get together. How much more, they agree, could be accomplished if chemists, engineers, doctors, police and consumers didn't tend to live in separate cubby holes. If representatives of a variety of scientific and social disciplines, and managers, consumers and producers could get together on technical-practical problems, scientists and engineers could find more clearly what users prefer — in cases especially where meeting one objective means that others must give a little, or a lot. Then the technical men could modify design or programs accordingly, and, at the same time, be able to use a variety viewpoints to solve problems.

In the case at hand, most of those present at the meeting agreed that the first and crucial step was to get regulatory agencies to cease thinking of themselves primarily as enforcement agencies. The doors should be opened to give and take until a practical answer or compromise aimed at meeting the legitimate needs of all parties could be hammered out.

This would call, it was agreed, for a great deal of flexibility, both by bureaucrats and by businessmen, which, in the present atmosphere of suspicion and mistrust may be difficult to achieve.

Major bills that didn't make it

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The lights went out on most of the major legislation introduced in the General Assembly as the session ended at midnight Friday.

Among major issues which failed to gain legislative approval are a sales tax exemption for the purchase of drugs, a no-fault automobile insurance plan, multiyear license plates and compensation for victims of violent crimes.

A bill intended to protect rape victims during a trial from questions about past sexual history also was killed in the Senate. A conflict-of-interest measure requiring publication of major business interests of candidates for elective office died for the session and a welfare revision plan to base benefits on a percentage of need rather than a flat amount also failed in the final moments of the senate.

Other major dead issues are:

—Truth in repair requiring written estimates of the cost for major a automobile repairs.

—Revision of the state's 141-year old criminal code.

—Revision of the legislative operation.

—Revision of the formula for distributing state aid to schools.

—Revision and updating of the state's election laws.

—Repeal of the blue law to allow Sunday sales.

—Gun control requiring registration of all hand guns.

—Ban on smoking in most public places.

—Ban on aerosol spray cans to protect the environment.

—Tax incentives for homeowners converting heating units to solar energy.

—Conjugal visits for prisoners.

—Ban on pay toilets.

—Decriminalization of public drunkeness.

Bills that passed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Legislature, attempting to grapple with the state's rising violent crime rate, has sent Gov. Christopher S. Bond a measure calling for mandatory prison sentences for convictions of use of a deadly weapon during the commission of a felony.

In completing the second half of the 78th General Assembly, other major pieces of legislation made it through the arduous legislative process. Measures revising state pension laws and a partial ban on studded snow tires were among measures approved.

Listed here are major bills which made it through to passage this session:

—Establishment of a small claims court system, where average citizens can avoid traditional complicated legal procedures and file a legal dispute for a minor fee.

—Impostion of a partial ban on studded snow tires which would last through nonwinter months.

—Increased regulations for mobile home manufacturers, including a penalty provsion for anyone not using proper tie-down methods for their homes.

—A package of six medical malpractice bills designed to stem the skyrocketing costs of insurance premiums to doctors. Other bills in the original package failed.

—Increasing the financial limitation the state can pay for the financially strapped public defender program.

—Elevation of bank facilities to full service banks, allowing banks in second and fourth class counties to open facilites and extend from 10 to 15 miles the maximum distance a facility in any county can be located from the main bank.

—A four-bill package of state pension revision bills, including one which would increase the take-home pay of legislators $420 annually.

—Creation of a so-called "open window" tax bill which requires public hearings in communities before the next year's property tax rate can be set.

—Increasing the interest rate the state can charge on revenue bonds.

—Increasing state subsidy for those state prisoners imprisoned in county jail facilites to $8 daily or 75 per cent of their costs, whichever is the lower figure.

—Creation of a study commission to review state's tax structure.

—Removal of the financial ceiling the state had operated under in funding its college scholarship grant program.

—Exemption of minor candidates from the campaign reporting provisions of the campaign disclosure bill.

If you get businessmen together, they, naturally, see what these regulations costs their businesses, how they cramp their ability to expand or to hold prices down. They note there has not been sufficient research to prove many of the dangers or that regulations would cure the problems — except at the cost of killing the patient.

There is no wrong or right involved here, he said. There are only different and valid objectives which conflict and call for the same sort of negotiations as between labor unions and management.

But we insist on getting into little boxes, the regulators in one group with their attorneys, the businessmen in a group by themselves and the academic types in an upstairs room. We have medical committees who see pollution only as a medical problem, legal committees who see it only as a problem of enforcement, environmentalists who see it only as a problem of protecting the environment and businessmen who see many of the regulations only as something hampering production.

We sit and fight in absolutes when we should be talking about some way to adjust between legitimate points of view. Our continual bickering and our failure to talk to each other reasonably is hurting everyone concerned — the businessmen, the consumer, the environmentalist, the worker and all other citizens who want both jobs and reasonable prices along with a cleaner, safer environment.

The problem is one often mentioned when scientists get together. How much more, they agree, could be accomplished if chemists, engineers, doctors, police and consumers didn't tend to live in separate cubby holes. If representatives of a variety of scientific and social disciplines, and managers, consumers and producers could get together on technical-practical problems, scientists and engineers could find more clearly what users prefer — in cases especially where meeting one objective means that others must give a little, or a lot. Then the technical men could modify design or programs accordingly, and, at the same time, be able to use a variety viewpoints to solve problems.

In the case at hand, most of those present at the meeting agreed that the first and crucial step was to get regulatory agencies to cease thinking of themselves primarily as enforcement agencies. The doors should be opened to give and take until a practical answer or compromise aimed at meeting the legitimate needs of all parties could be hammered out.

This would call, it was agreed, for a great deal of flexibility, both by bureaucrats and by businessmen, which, in the present atmosphere of suspicion and mistrust may be difficult to achieve.

Major bills that didn't make it

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The lights went out on most of the major legislation introduced in the General Assembly as the session ended at midnight Friday.

Among major issues which failed to gain legislative approval are a sales tax exemption for the purchase of drugs, a no-fault automobile insurance plan, multiyear license plates and compensation for victims of violent crimes.

A bill intended to protect rape victims during a trial from questions about past sexual history also was killed in the Senate. A conflict-of-interest measure requiring publication of major business interests of candidates for elective office died for the session and a welfare revision plan to base benefits on a percentage of need rather than a flat amount also failed in the final moments of the senate.

Other major dead issues are:

—Truth in repair requiring written estimates of the cost for major a automobile repairs.

—Revision of the state's 141-year old criminal code.

—Revision of the legislative operation.

—Revision of the formula for distributing state aid to schools.

—Revision and updating of the state's election laws.

—Repeal of the blue law to allow Sunday sales.

—Gun control requiring registration of all hand guns.

—Ban on smoking in most public places.

—Ban on aerosol spray cans to protect the environment.

—Tax incentives for homeowners converting heating units to solar energy.

—Conjugal visits for prisoners.

—Ban on pay toilets.

—Decriminalization of public drunkeness.

Bills that passed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Legislature, attempting to grapple with the state's rising violent crime rate, has sent Gov. Christopher S. Bond a measure calling for mandatory prison sentences for convictions of use of a deadly weapon during the commission of a felony.

In completing the second half of the 78th General Assembly, other major pieces of legislation made it through the arduous legislative process. Measures revising state pension laws and a partial ban on studded snow tires were among measures approved.

Listed here are major bills which made it through to passage this session:

—Establishment of a small claims court system, where average citizens can avoid traditional complicated legal procedures and file a legal dispute for a minor fee.

—Impostion of a partial ban on studded snow tires which would last through nonwinter months.

—Increased regulations for mobile home manufacturers, including a penalty provsion for anyone not using proper tie-down methods for their homes.

—A package of six medical malpractice bills designed to stem the skyrocketing costs of insurance premiums to doctors. Other bills in the original package failed.

—Increasing the financial limitation the state can pay for the financially strapped public defender program.

—Elevation of bank facilities to full service banks, allowing banks in second and fourth class counties to open facilites and extend from 10 to 15 miles the maximum distance a facility in any county can be located from the main bank.

—A four-bill package of state pension revision bills, including one which would increase the take-home pay of legislators $420 annually.

—Creation of a so-called "open window" tax bill which requires public hearings in communities before the next year's property tax rate can be set.

—Increasing the interest rate the state can charge on revenue bonds.

—Increasing state subsidy for those state prisoners imprisoned in county jail facilites to $8 daily or 75 per cent of their costs, whichever is the lower figure.

—Creation of a study commission to review state's tax structure.

—Removal of the financial ceiling the state had operated under in funding its college scholarship grant program.

—Exemption of minor candidates from the campaign reporting provisions of the campaign disclosure bill.

Court orders investigation of doctor

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — A plea of guilty has been entered by Dr. Kenneth L. Kelsey of Aurora, Mo., to a federal charge that he illegally sold 1,000 doses of a tranquilizer to undercover agents

Judge William R. Collinson of the U.S. District Court ordered an investigation of Dr. Kelsey's record and background.

James C. England, assistant U. S. district attorney, said five similar federal charges against Dr. Kelsey will be dismissed when he is sentenced.

"It was Dr. Kelsey's desire to dispose of this case," said William Wendt, his attorney.

Wendt also said there will be no further proceedings against Dr. Kelsey on a first-degree state murder charge in the slaying of one of his patients until after the disposition of the federal case.

Dr. Kelsey continued in federal custody at the county jail in Springfield, with bond set at $15,000.

The murder charge stems from the shooting death on Feb. 11 of Mrs. Cynthia Jane Hall, who had been a patient of Dr. Kelsey for 20 to 25 years at Aurora.

Mrs. Hall was staying at the home of a friend in Aurora, where she was recuperating after an operation for cancer which had been recommended by another doctor Mrs. Hall consulted after Dr. Kelsey said there was no hope for her.

On a tip from two federal agents investigating Dr. Kelsey and his new wife on the tranquilizer sales, Lawrence County authorities obtained a warrant on March 24 to search Dr. Kelsey's new home at Shell Knob, in the Table Rock Lake resort area 30 miles south of Aurora in southwest Missouri.

They reported confiscating a small pistol which belonged to Mrs. Kelsey. The Missouri Highway Patrol's laboratory reported it was the weapon which killed Mrs. Hall.

Mrs. Kelsey was charged with being an accessory after the fact of murder, but that charge was dismissed when she appeared for a preliminary hearing at Mount Vernon, Mo., on April 16.

Sam Jones, Lawrence County prosecuting attorney, said he did not want to have to disclose at that hearing the evidence he had against Dr. Kelsey.

Where are the whooping cranes?

By JOHN M. WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

The migratory habits of the endangered whooping crane remain mysteries to wildlife experts, and now there's even a bigger question — just where are 54 of the big birds.

There are 61 whooping cranes in existence — 57 of them which winter at the Aransas Wildlife Refuge along the Texas Gulf Coast, the other four which winter with the sandhill cranes in New Mexico.

The Texas flock migrates northward each spring on a route taking them over the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles, central Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota. From there, they veer to the northwest, passing over northwestern North Dakota or eastern Montana, and into the Canadian province of Alberta.

The summer nesting grounds are in the Wood Buffalo National Park, a wilderness area in northeastern Alberta and in the Northwest Territory.

Only three of the whoopers, a male, a female and a young bird, remained at Aransas as of Tuesday, according to Lee Marlatt, assistant manager of the Aransas refuge. The others have flown the coop in various numbers.

Marlatt said he looks for the final three whoopers to be gone by this Friday, when the next aerial survey of the area is slated.

The migration began early this month, and while most of the birds have been gone for more than a week, there have been very few sightings along the flyway.

There have been no confirmed sightings in Oklahoma or Kansas, and only one in Nebraska, where a deadly fowl cholera still plagues several lagoons in the central part of the state near Holdrege.

Last year the cholera killed more than 20,000 ducks, geese and other birds. This year the death toll stands at about 7,500.

Last year, several whoopers sat down to rest right in the middle of the cholera-infested area. Volunteers and wildlife workers using aircraft, guns and anything else that would make a loud noises, pushed a frantic and successful effort to haze the birds out of the area.

Officials do not know if the whoopers are susceptible to the cholera, and they don't particularly want to find out — especially by having the cranes again landing in the area near Holdrege. Preparations have been made to scare the whoopers away from the area if they land there this year, and aerial surveys of the area are made on a nightly basis.

Last year's brief brush with the cholera had no apparent ill effects on the birds.

The cholera now appears to be under control, according to Larry Oborny, a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Grand Island, Neb.

The cholera runs rampant when large concentrations of migrating fowl congregate in one area, such as the small lagoons in the Holdrege area.

But most of the migrating birds have moved on to the north.

Officials are still keeping their fingers crossed, hoping the whoopers don't choose south-central Nebraska as a resting spot, and chances are that most of the whoopers have already flown over the trouble spot.

The first whooper migration monitoring system was set up last fall, with headquarters in Pierre, S.D.

However, the system doesn't seem to be producing overwhelming results so far.

"They've got a lot of people going around in circles trying to find where they (the whoopers) are," said Ron Sullivan of the Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) in Oklahoma.

Richard Hill of the FWS in Pierre says it's easier to monitor the whoopers southward migration during the fall because there are hunters tramping the fields. But in the spring, the hunters aren't there.

"We've got quite a few sightings in," said Hill in a telephone interview, "but frankly most of them look kind of questionable."

Hill said untrained observers often mistake white pelicans, snow geese and other birds for the whoopers, so it's difficult to keep tabs on the migration.

So far this year, the best migratory sighting was made on the Swanson Reservoir near Trenton, Neb., Hill said. The Swanson sighting occurred April 4-5, when two parks maintenance workers said they spotted two whoopers. "That's definitely the best one we have," said Hill.

Other unconfirmed, but "pretty good" sightings, according to Hill, have been made near Callaway, Neb., where seven birds were reported April 13, and near Carson, N.D., April 10, when two adult birds were seen through a scope.

Asked where he thought the missing whoopers might be, Hill said he could only make a "wild guess."

"It's pretty tough to follow all the birds from Aransas all the way north, and likewise south," said Hill. "When they're going north they pretty well — they just haul — the spring migration is a lot faster" than the fall movement, Hill said.

While excellent tabs are kept on the birds while they are at Aransas and the Wood Buffalo National Park in Canada, their migration remains a mystery, Hill said.

A legend at 70

In his St. Pat's jacket, Toots Schuman is as much a Miner as any student on the University of Missouri-Rolla campus. The perennial St. Pat parade marshal, Schuman was a youthful tag-along at UMR's first St. Pat's celebration almost 70 years ago.

'Toots' is living legend to students at UMR

ROLLA — It has been almost seven decades since a small Rolla boy, nicknamed "Toots," tagged along behind a group of students marching around with a drum and a horn in the first St. Pat's parade at the University of Missouri-Rolla. (It was then the University of Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy.)

This year, as usual, "Toots" whose full name is Edwin K. Schuman, lead the annual UMR St. Pat's parade as honorary parade marshal.

Now almost 80, Schuman has become almost a living legend to succeeding generations of UMR Miners. As a student he was St. Pat in 1919. (Miss Edna Kiel, daughter of the mayor of St. Louis, was "Queen of Love and Beauty" that year). And he has seen most of the St. Pat's celebrations in those years in between.

Schuman remembers vividly the events that led up to that first St. Pat's holiday.

"I lived just a block north of the drug store, which was a hang-out place for the students. One night I saw a crowd of students there and someone making a speech. They said that the University at Columbia was putting on some kind of celebration. They took up a collection and sent a delegate to Columbia to find out about it."

(Actually, St. Pat's originated on the Columbia campus. Historical versions vary, but most agree that it all started on a warm spring day in 1903. A group of engineering students, bemoaning the fact that it was a long time between Christmas and Easter holidays, decided that since St. Patrick had "engineered" the banishment of snakes from Ireland, he must have been an engineer. Therefore, it was fitting that engineering students should celebrate his birthday by taking a holiday from classes.)

As Schuman tells it, the Rolla delegate returned with the story and the Miners enthusiastically agreed. "Students went on the campus at night and painted on the sidewalk that anybody who didn't cut class that day would be thrown in the stock pond. So, on March 17, everybody cut class," he adds. And young Toots followed the students as they marched around town with their impromptu parade.

"The next year they had a bigger celebration, and a student played St. Pat, all dressed up in a green robe. And from then on, St. Pat's became bigger and bigger," he recalls.

In many ways, Schuman is as colorful and interesting as the parade he leads. He's a walking encyclopedia on UMR and Rolla. He has degrees in law and civil engineering. He has been an engineer in bridge construction, a business man, a math instructor, a chemist and a translator of foreign technical publications. He's a horticulturist, an experimenter, and an inventor with a patent to his credit. He's still going strong--and he can't think of very many subjects that don't interest him.

He developed his enthusiasm for hard work and learning at an early age. As a member of a family with a variety of business interests in Rolla, he started working as a young boy after school, and on week-ends and summer vacations. When business was slow or he was involved in routine tasks, he always had a book handy to study. He still does.

His nickname, "Toots," was given him by his grandmother because he was so much smaller than the rest of the family. The name struck, and three-quarters of a century later, it's hard to find anyone who knows him as Edwin.

He has incorporated this nickname into one of his inventions, "Tootsizer," a patented plant food.

Schuman says his invention grew out of his frustration as a gardener. "I would get two or three tomatoes off a plant and then they would turn brown and die," he says. He began searching for something that would help his garden.

"I had always been interested in the effects of nutrition on humans and it occurred to me that perhaps plants need a certain combination of nutrients, just as people do," he explains.

He drew on his background in science and came up with a product that gave him a good garden. "And when I'm talking about a good garden, I'm talking about a half bushel or a bushel of tomatoes to the plant," he reports. Other Tootsizer-nourished plants also reach phenomenal size and production. He patented Tootsizer in 1965.

"Now Tootsizer is my life," Schuman says. It isn't unusual for him to work a 12-hour day producing and marketing his plant food. And he's working on other ideas along the same line.

Winning poems

200 years ago men became free-man and wife were glad to be. Many troubles were near and far. Every year there was a brand new star. Our American flag now flies high.-Many foreigner wonders why. We fought a war that put us in a fix,- we won in the year of 1776, and then the war between the states, we fought day and night very late and when General Lee surrendered his sword. General Grant said "Praise The Lord". Our land was field with guns and wars. But now we have brand new stores- Many people everywhere,- they shout, and sing then say their prayers- and now no more are we in a fix. It is now the year of 1976.

Ricky Romanowski--
Kelly Elementary
1st place

July 4, 1776 was the day-- that America bagan to live. It was the day of Independence and each one had to give a little portion of their lives -- to help America grow strong. For they were all a part of Uncle Sam. We all have to lend a helping hand -- if we want to receive the Spirit of 1776 and show the world we can't be licked -- still yet in 1976.

Debbie Russell--
Scott Central
1st place.

The world stands at attention all over the land, and gives America a great big hand.

You're looking good America you've already been told, take a look around you're 200 years old.

But your still growing from day to day, we hope you keep on, we all pray.

But you didn't do it alone, like Alexander Bell with his great telephone.

And Ben Franklin with his kite and key, he went and discovered electricity.

There are so many people who helped shape America, you know it's a shame, we can't pay respect to every single name.

But for those who did their part, they made America have a great big heart.

And thats what made the "Spirit of 76" and all the people that got America out of a fix.

They all did their part without a dare, all they needed was a hope and a praryer.

Gail Evans--
Oran R-3
1st place

The "Spirit of 76" is what you think and how.

It's part of our past heritage and "yes"

It's what is happening now!

In a place in Pennsylvania, at Valley Forge you know men said, "We're not very fit, but its really not a place to quit."

"Let's stay here in the snow."

On July 4, '76' with Declaration in hand- a group of men assembled-this was our governing band. That's why our soldiers bravely fight- and people go out to vote so political parties fight-them mix, but thar's the Spirit of '76'.

The Prayer

"This is the victory that overcomes the world, our faith." (1 John 5:4, RSV)

PRAYER: Our God, we thank You for this marvelous gift that You have given us: faith. Thus we ask You to help us grow in faith so that we shall not perish when pain or desperation knocks at our door. Amen.

Morley appreciation dinner

The Morley Veterans of Foreign Wars Post and Ladies Auxiliary 5368 sponsored an appreciation dinner at the post home Monday night with 85 persons in attendance. Tables were decorated in red, white and blue colors with replicas depicting Bicentennial themes. Special guests were Mayor and Mrs. J. R. Lee of Morley, Mayor and Mrs. Harvey Shirkey of Vanduser, Mayor and Mrs. Ben Evans of Oran, volunteer firemen and their wives of Morley and Oran, Morley City Council and wives, auxiliary police and wives of Oran, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dirnberger of Oran and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Dirnberger of Chaffee. Mrs. Kathleen Taylor worded a prayer. Following the dinner Commander Elbert Clark of Morley and president Fannie Davis of Oran welcomed the guests and members. The auxiliary president presented the Mayors' wives with Buddy Poppy corsages. Youth Activity Chairman Ada J. Wagoner of Oran explained the involvement of youth participation and read the four first place winners in a poem contest for our fifth and sixth grade students. The two Dirnberger men provided music, playing some of the oldies but goodies.

He's a horticulturist, an experimenter, and an inventor with a patent to his credit. He's still going strong--and he can't think of very many subjects that don't interest him.

He developed his enthusiasm for hard work and learning at an early age. As a member of a family with a variety of business interests in Rolla, he started working as a young boy after school, and on week-ends and summer vacations. When business was slow or he was involved in routine tasks, he always had a book handy to study. He still does.

His nickname, "Toots," was given him by his grandmother because he was so much smaller than the rest of the family. The name struck, and three-quarters of a century later, it's hard to find anyone who knows him as Edwin.

He has incorporated this nickname into one of his inventions, "Tootsizer," a patented plant food.

Schuman says his invention grew out of his frustration as a gardener. "I would get two or three tomatoes off a plant and then they would turn brown and die," he says. He began searching for something that would help his garden.

"I had always been interested in the effects of nutrition on humans and it occurred to me that perhaps plants need a certain combination of nutrients, just as people do," he explains.

He drew on his background in science and came up with a product that gave him a good garden. "And when I'm talking about a good garden, I'm talking about a half bushel or a bushel of tomatoes to the plant," he reports. Other Tootsizer-nourished plants also reach phenomenal size and production. He patented Tootsizer in 1965.

"Now Tootsizer is my life," Schuman says. It isn't unusual for him to work a 12-hour day producing and marketing his plant food. And he's working on other ideas along the same line.

Morley appreciation dinner

The Morley Veterans of Foreign Wars Post and Ladies Auxiliary 5368 sponsored an appreciation dinner at the post home Monday night with 85 persons in attendance. Winning poems

200 years ago men became free-man and wife were glad to be. Many troubles were near and far. Every year there was a brand new star. Our American flag now flies high.-Many foreigner wonders why. We fought a war that put us in a fix,- we won in the year of 1776, and then the war between the states, we fought day and night very late and when General Lee surrendered his sword. General Grant said "Praise The Lord". Our land was field with guns and wars. But now we have brand new stores- Many people everywhere,- they shout, and sing then say their prayers- and now no more are we in a fix. It is now the year of 1976.

July 4, 1776 was the day-- that America bagan to live. It was the day of Independence and each one had to give a little portion of their lives -- to help America grow strong. For they were all a part of Uncle Sam. We all have to lend a helping hand -- if we want to receive the Spirit of 1776 and show the world we can't be licked -- still yet in 1976.

Debbie Russell--

The world stands at attention all over the land, and gives America a great big hand.

You're looking good America you've already been told, take a look around you're 200 years old.

But your still growing from day to day, we hope you keep on, we all pray.

But you didn't do it alone, like Alexander Bell with his great telephone.

And Ben Franklin with his kite and key, he went and discovered electricity.

There are so many people who helped shape America, you know it's a shame, we can't pay respect to every single name.

But for those who did their part, they made America have a great big heart.

And thats what made the "Spirit of 76" and all the people that got America out of a fix.

They all did their part without a dare, all they needed was a hope and a praryer.

The "Spirit of 76" is what you think and how.

It's part of our past heritage and "yes"

It's what is happening now!

In a place in Pennsylvania, at Valley Forge you know men said, "We're not very fit, but its really not a place to quit." "Let's stay here in the snow."

On July 4, '76' with Declaration in hand- a group of men assembled-this was our governing band. That's why our soldiers bravely fight- and people go out to vote so political parties fight-them mix, but thar's the Spirit of '76'.

The Prayer

"This is the victory that overcomes the world, our faith." (1 John 5:4, RSV)

PRAYER: Our God, we thank You for this marvelous gift that You have given us: faith. Thus we ask You to help us grow in faith so that we shall not perish when pain or desperation knocks at our door. Amen.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1961, astronaut Alan Shepard was rocketed 115 miles into space from Cape Canaveral, Fla. He was the first U.S. space explorer.

On this date:

In 1570, Turkey declared war on Venice for refusing to surrender the island of Cyprus.

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died in exile on the island of St. Helena.

In 1824, British troops occupied Rangoon, Burma.

In 1864, Union troops were routed by Confederates in the Civil War Battle of the Wilderness, west of Fredericksburg, Va.

In 1936, war ended in Ethiopia as the capital, Addis Ababa, fell to Italian troops.

In 1955, West Germany became a sovereign state as the terms of the Paris agreements of 1954 went into effect.

Ten years ago: Prices tumbled on Wall Street after General Motors announced it would cut back production because of a decline in car sales.

Five years ago: There was a monetary crisis in Europe because of a sell-off of U.S. dollars, and several government banks suspended foreign exchange trading.

One year ago: President Ford asked Congress for more than $500 million to aid the resettlement of South Vietnamese refugees in the U.S.

Today's birthday: Food expert James Beard is 71.

Thought for today: If man had heeded the advice always to keep both feet on the ground, we wouldn't be living in the space age — anonymous.

Shrines are renovated

WASHINGTON (AP) — "There are 58 steps leading up to the Lincoln Memorial," says Jim Jeffers, "but for handicapped people like me in wheelchairs, it might as well have been 5,800!"

Jeffers recently became the first "wheelchair person" ever to enter the memorial chamber of the nation's most popular historic shrine without being carried bodily up its 80 feet of stairs.

As executive director of the U.S. Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, he accomplished this feat while inspecting renovations being made by the National Park Service at a cost of nearly $1 million.

The alterations will permit people in wheelchairs, with crutches, braces, or other physical handicaps, to view the statue of Abraham Lincoln close up.

Jeffers says that an estimated 17 million Americans will visit Washington during the bicentennial year, and approximately 3 million of them will be handicapped.

According to Jack Fish, head of National Capital Parks, the local field office of the National Park Service, extensive landscaping and regrading was needed at the front of the Lincoln Memorial to install a concrete ramp with an easy 5 per cent incline for wheelchairs. The new ramp leads from the street to the ground floor of the memorial, where restrooms have been remodeled to accommodate wheelchairs, and an elevator installed to whisk visitors to the main floor.

In addition to the Lincoln Memorial, National Park Service is also spending over three quarters of a million dollars to remodel the Jefferson Memorial and the Washington Monument to improve access. Ramps for wheelchairs are being installed in nearly 200 sidewalk curbs around the Mall, the Washington Monument, and the Ellipse near the White House.

HEW Assistant Secretary Stanley B. Thomas Jr. is chairman of the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, composed of the nine major federal agencies that spend over $32 billion a year for construction of buildings and transportation facilities. The board's mission is to monitor compliance with federal law which requires barrier-free access for handicapped people to public housing, office buildings and transportation systems.

During the bicentennial year, according to Thomas, the Lincoln Memorial will be a national symbol of an "Accessible America."

"The nation's capital belongs to all Americans," Thomas said. "We are making sure that in our bicentennial year, America's handicapped citizens are given equal rights of access, as an example of what can be accomplished all over the country. We hope that our 17 million visitors will return to their communities to take a new look at the many barriers which keep handicapped people from full participation in cultural and business activities."

He noted that these might range from sidewalk curbs to lack of elevators and restrooms in public buildings and places of employment.

Jim Jeffers, a native of West Virginia, has lived and worked in Washington for three years, but until his recent inspection visit had never been able to enter the capital's most popular tourist attraction.

As he looked out from the Lincoln Memorial toward the Reflecting Pool and the Washington Monument in the distance, he said, "It's truly inspiring. From here, it seems that nothing is impossible!"

Highway commission to meet

JEFFERSON CITY— The Missouri State Highway Commission will meet May 12 and 13 in the hearing room at the Highway Building.

Scheduled delegations will be heard by the commission on May 12. Other commission business of a routine nature also will be transacted.

On May 13, business not transacted on May 12 will be conducted.

Adjusting your driving speed for hills, curves, and varying traffic conditions is essential to keeping your car under control and to driving safely.

Eight major bills passed by legislators

But some things did work. The eight major appropriations bills, for example, were approved a week before the deadline created by joint legislative rules.

Approval of the $2.6 billion in operating appropriations that early appeared to make the final two weeks a more leisurely paced affair than in other years.

One appropriations bill still was hanging as legislators entered their last week. That was the capital improvements bill, containing more than $50 million in state construction projects throughout Missouri.

The other appropriations bill, making supplemental and emergency appropriations for the remainder of the current fiscal year, was approved the first day of the last week. The key item in that emergency bill was more than $9 million appropriated to maintain payments to welfare families with dependent children.

Gem State's minerals

Settlement of Idaho was spurred by the discovery of silver at Coeur d'Alene in 1884. The state still leads the nation in production of that metal. It also ranks high in production of antimony, lead, cobalt, garnet, phosphate rock, vanadium, zinc and mercury. Total mineral production in 1974 was some $196 million.

Mississippi County is looking for a new home for museum

CHARLESTON — Total receipts of the Mississippi County Historical Society's bake sale, held in conjunction with the annual Dogwood-Azalea Festival, are not all in yet, but it seems that the net will be around $170. Thus the society, organized with such enthusiasm in 1966, may soon find itself facing a financial crisis. Rent of the Russell Hotel dining room is costing $50 per month — an expense which can quickly consume the bake sale income.

Really, though, lack of a home is more of a problem than is lack of funds. In its earlier days the society to some extent supported itself with art sales. Now lack of space makes such activities difficult. For a while the Russell Hotel seemed to be a very appropriate home. Last summer, however, the owner of the hotel thought he had an opportunity to earn greater rents, and the society was asked to move.

The deal fell through, and the society was told it might stay, but in the meantime most of the exhibits had been packed and, since the owner has continued to hunt for another renter or a purchaser, they have remained packed.

Ever since the organization of the society, the Missouri Pacific depot in Charleston has been considered a possible alternate site for a home and museum, and the railroad company was persuaded to donate the building, but not the land on which it sets. Since the building has been vacant, scavengers and vandals have wrecked it to such an extent that repairing it woul be beyond the normal means of the society.

Several efforts to obtain grants from federal and state agencies have failed. Recently, however, the Junior Chamber of Commerce has become interested in the project, too, and there is now the remote possibility of a grant of $100,000 through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This should suffice to purchase the depot site and make needed repairs, after which the society will again have space for its museum and other activities, and the Jaycees will have their own meeting place. Police protection will be available, and the degradations of the past will be prevented.

If this grant does not materialize, society leaders will welcome suggestions as to how to obtain space. Perhaps, as has happened in other communities, some public spirited person will bequeath a suitable building to the society.

Even with the museum packed for an eventual move, the society is not entirely inactive. The treasurer, of course, has to function (Mrs. Agnes Cunningham fills this job). The society is often asked to send representatives to community meetings. And quite a few inquiries concerning such matters as genealogy, location of graveyards, availability of the museum for tours, etd., have to be answered. Even occasional acquisitions still occur.

The Mississippi County Historical Society's directors hope the community will continue to support the organization thrrough a difficult period. After it again has a good place to display exhibits and space for community functions and associated fund raising activities, the society can be a vital and appreciated part of the community.

Membership dues in the organization are modest — only $2 a year for an adult. Anyone can help the organization by joining or paying past dues. Make checks payable to Mississippi County Historical Society and mail them to the president, Benj. Bird Moore, 500 N. Green, Charleston.

HONORING SENIOR CITIZENS

As part of the celebration of our country's 200th birthday, President Ford has declared May, 1976, as Older Americans Month.

Without question, one of America's most precious natural resources is the collective wisdom, experience and abilities of our older citizens. It is truly fitting that we set aside one entire month to honor the senior citizens who have earned the gratitude and respect of our society.

Fight Against Inflation

However, at the same time we must concern ourselves with the troublesome fact that most of our 23 million senior citizens over the age of 65 are waging a daily struggle against the high cost of living.

As Chairman of the Aging Subcommittee of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare I read reports which show that the rises in rents and property taxes, utility bills, transportation costs, health charges, and food prices are forcing an unbearable handicap on our senior citizens who are forced to live on a fixed income. Hopefully, the recent 6.4 per cent cost of living increase in Social Security benefits will allow our older Americans an opportunity to keep their heads above water during this time of high inflation.

Certainly, the single greatest threat to the quality of life of older Americans is inflation. However, during the month of May, while we are honoring our senior citizens, we must also rededicate our efforts to improve other aspects in the lives of our older Americans.

Other Senior Citizen Needs

For example, our efforts must include providing:

- an adequate retirement income and access to reasonably-priced health care and other services to enhance the quality of the lives of the senior citizens;
- protection from crime and improved transportation;
- a genuine opportunity for senior citizens to fulfill themselves after formal retirement and to pursue their own brand of happiness, whether it be found in work, education, volunteer service or, for that matter, in resting and relaxing.

If we can meet these goals, and at the same time get a hold of the inflation problem, the vitality of life for Older Americans will be a living testament to the principles on which this nation was founded -- an enduring memorial of far greater value than any of the activities that will take place during this month of May, 1976.

'Prassire' crime turns violent as...

Lawlessness has become part of Israel's make-up

TEL AVIV — (NEA) — Israelis woke up recently to discover they were in the midst of a wave of violence and crime — in the best (or rather the worst) American tradition, complete with threats, extortion, "protection money", rape, murder — and even a corrupt police officer or two.

According to official police figures for 1974, one out of every 21 Israelis (or 162,000 persons out of a population of 3,400,000) was the victim of a "serious" crime. This is approximately the same rate as in the United States, according to FBI figures.

There has always been crime in Israel, despite stories of the "good old days" 30 to 40 years ago, when persons left their doors unlocked. (As one wit said, "they were left unlocked since there was nothing to steal then.")

But the crime has always been of a "passive type," such as doctoring income tax returns, dealing on the black market, stealing cars and breaking into and robbing apartments. The victim, often the state itself, would lose financially — but physical harm was a rarity.

But all this has changed.

The days of peaceful crime in Israel have passed.

Police Minister Shlomo Hillel recently told the Knesset (Parliament) that crimes of violence had increased 37 per cent in 1975 over 1974 — and were still rising. Attempts at murder had increased by 100 per cent; murder threats had increased by 35 per cent. The overall crime rate increased by 13 per cent in 1975, and by a total of 32 per cent since the Yom Kippur War of October, 1973.

The sharp upsurge in crime was expected, for every war brings in its wake a crime wave. As Inspector-General of Police Shaul Rosolio wrote more than a year ago:

"The Yom Kippur War influence was felt throughout 1974. Its results were widespread social, economic and political unrest, the dissolution of moral values and an increase in criminal activity . . ."

But the roots of the present outburst of violence go back many years before the Yom Kippur war, according to both criminologists and sociologists here. A primary cause is the fact that Israel is, and was, a land of immigration, with a mingling of persons from diverse backgrounds, cultures and outlooks. And this causes friction.

Superimposed on this was an enormous, unwieldy and inefficient bureaucracy. And the best way to fight this bureaucracy, as thousands of newcomers learned all to soon, was "to pound on the table." If this did not help, "to pound on the head of the official sitting behind the table."

Punishment for such acts was generally mild — for the public usually sympathized with the attacker, not with the official. Such violence becomes a way of life.

Social workers were soon beaten up, not for inefficiency but for not granting higher monthly social welfare payments. Teachers were attacked not for being bad teachers, but for giving bad marks. Doctors were thrashed for not giving the medicines that the patient — yes, the patient — demanded.

The narrow line faded between those demanding their legitimate rights from the bureaucratic system, to those actually preying on the system, and on the public, in some criminal form.

"Get rich" schemes by illegal means proliferated. And the easiest of all schemes was the "protection" racket.

This was the state of affairs when the Yom Kippur War broke out — and thousands of Israeli soldiers fell; others came home in a bitter mood. The entire population went into a state of shock, casting a bitter eye at the country's leaders, whom, they felt, had betrayed them.

Yitzhak Rabin replaced Golda Meir as prime minister. Even a charismatic figure like Moshe Dayan fell in public favor.

A series of financial scandals rocked the country. The Israel-British Bank collapsed — since its director-general of the Israel Corporation was found guilty of fraud, bribery and corruption. Even worse, corruption was found in the Israel Defense Forces, a body which had been held until now in the highest esteem.

Faith in the country's police and judicial system wavered, and more persons with grievances took the law into their own hands.

A doctor in Nahariya refused to give the treatment a patient demanded; he was murdered. An official in Ashdod refused to give a man who failed his driving test a driving license; he was shot to death. An irate fan at a soccer game in Rehovot stabbed a player to death. A kangaroo court in Jerusalem sentenced a member of the underworld to death — and carried out the sentence.

And an American couple, new immigrants who had settled in a small village near Jerusalem, pulled up stakes and went back to the States since a pair of hoodlums were terrorizing them and the rest of the village.

These cases, admittedly, were isolated and extreme.

But in Israel today the underworld flourishes as never before. Conservative estimates place the number of citizens living off of crime — including prostitution and the black market in foreign currency — at between 20,000 and 30,000.

There is much talk of "organized crime" in the American pattern, but so far it has failed to materialize.

Fortunately strong public pressure is causing an improvement of the situation. Some time ago when the situation reached intolerable proportions in Tel Aviv, the police moved a unit of the crack Border Force — whose job is to fight infiltrators along the border — into the city. The crime rate dropped by some 30 per cent.

A good supply of dust can prevent a glowing sunset. When sunlight, comprised of light from various colored wavelengths, bumps into the atmosphere's dust particles, the component parts are scattered and deflected. The shorter wave lengths, especially the blue, spread more than the longer waves like red and yellow.

'Prassire' crime turns violent as...

Lawlessness has become part of Israel's make-up

TEL AVIV — (NEA) — Israelis woke up recently to discover they were in the midst of a wave of violence and crime — in the best (or rather the worst) American tradition, complete with threats, extortion, "protection money", rape, murder — and even a corrupt police officer or two.

According to official police figures for 1974, one out of every 21 Israelis (or 162,000 persons out of a population of 3,400,000) was the victim of a "serious" crime. This is approximately the same rate as in the United States, according to FBI figures.

There has always been crime in Israel, despite stories of the "good old days" 30 to 40 years ago, when persons left their doors unlocked. (As one wit said, "they were left unlocked since there was nothing to steal then.")

But the crime has always been of a "passive type," such as doctoring income tax returns, dealing on the black market, stealing cars and breaking into and robbing apartments. The victim, often the state itself, would lose financially — but physical harm was a rarity.

But all this has changed.

The days of peaceful crime in Israel have passed.

Police Minister Shlomo Hillel recently told the Knesset (Parliament) that crimes of violence had increased 37 per cent in 1975 over 1974 — and were still rising. Attempts at murder had increased by 100 per cent; murder threats had increased by 35 per cent. The overall crime rate increased by 13 per cent in 1975, and by a total of 32 per cent since the Yom Kippur War of October, 1973.

The sharp upsurge in crime was expected, for every war brings in its wake a crime wave. As Inspector-General of Police Shaul Rosolio wrote more than a year ago:

"The Yom Kippur War influence was felt throughout 1974. Its results were widespread social, economic and political unrest, the dissolution of moral values and an increase in criminal activity . . ."

But the roots of the present outburst of violence go back many years before the Yom Kippur war, according to both criminologists and sociologists here. A primary cause is the fact that Israel is, and was, a land of immigration, with a mingling of persons from diverse backgrounds, cultures and outlooks. And this causes friction.

Superimposed on this was an enormous, unwieldy and inefficient bureaucracy. And the best way to fight this bureaucracy, as thousands of newcomers learned all to soon, was "to pound on the table." If this did not help, "to pound on the head of the official sitting behind the table."

Punishment for such acts was generally mild — for the public usually sympathized with the attacker, not with the official. Such violence becomes a way of life.

Social workers were soon beaten up, not for inefficiency but for not granting higher monthly social welfare payments. Teachers were attacked not for being bad teachers, but for giving bad marks. Doctors were thrashed for not giving the medicines that the patient — yes, the patient — demanded.

The narrow line faded between those demanding their legitimate rights from the bureaucratic system, to those actually preying on the system, and on the public, in some criminal form.

"Get rich" schemes by illegal means proliferated. And the easiest of all schemes was the "protection" racket.

This was the state of affairs when the Yom Kippur War broke out — and thousands of Israeli soldiers fell; others came home in a bitter mood. The entire population went into a state of shock, casting a bitter eye at the country's leaders, whom, they felt, had betrayed them.

Yitzhak Rabin replaced Golda Meir as prime minister. Even a charismatic figure like Moshe Dayan fell in public favor.

In Macedonia, it is said that a magpie on the roof means guests are coming.

Victim claims inmate was attacker

CALIFORNIA, Mo. (AP) — Carolyn Atkins, former superintendent of the state Correctional Center for Women who was seriously stabbed last fall, says there is no doubt in her mind that an inmate at the facility was her attacker.

"Kathy Webb came through the door with a cane in her hand," Mrs. Atkins testified Monday in opening the prosecution's case against Miss Webb, 34, on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

"She hit me first with the cane. I backed back and then she started stabbing at me," said Mrs. Atkins, 45, who was stabbed at least nine times with a nine-inch knife as she entered her home across from the prison at Tipton on Sept. 18.

Prosecutor Clarence Hawk, who noted that four of the wounds are "commonly regarded by the medical profession as fatal," said the evidence would show that Miss Webb, who had been serving a 25-year termfor robbery, was guilty of assault with intent to kill in the stabbing.

A. Gary Schmidt, Miss Webb's attorney, waived an opening statement Monday, planning to outline his case after the prosecution completes its full presentation, probably sometime today.

The trial is expected to last into Wednesday, with the jury of 10 men and two women along with one woman alternate juror being sequestered through the course of the trial. That means they are not permitted to go home in the evenings or associate with friends and relatives.

A subdued Mrs. Atkins under went more than an hour of testimony Monday, much of it repetitious of testimony presented at a January preliminary hearing when Miss Webb was ordered to stand trial on the charge.

Mrs. Atkins told the jury that while her attacker wore a black nylon stocking over her head, she knew it was Miss Webb.

"I had known her some months," said Mrs. Atkins, who acknowledged that the relationship with the inmate up to the stabbing had been "cordial" rather than friendly. "I knew her on sight and I could recognize her features (beneath the stocking)."

After being hit with the cane, Mrs. Atkins said she moved away and her attacker began stabbing her.

"I fell on my stomach and I could feel the stab wounds in my back," said Mrs. Atkins, who was transferred to a cental administrative post after returning to work in March although she remains under a doctor's care for the wounds. "I knew the knife was still in me."

Donald Hicks, then a corrections system inmate assigned to Tipton and now on parole, recounted how he heard Mrs. Atkins scream, saw her stabbed three times and finally captured the person who wielded the knife.

After grabbing the assailant, Hicks said he pulled the nylon stocking from her head and recognized Kathy Webb.

Father of four economizes by building the family home

LACEY, Wash. (AP) — Building costs were high, at times over $20 a square foot, so Dan Woollett built his own sawmill, borrowed and begged materials and turned the gifts into a new house.

"If I had to spend any money on it, I probably wouldn't have it," said Woollett, 26, a father of four.

Using begged, borrowed and donated parts, Woollett built his own sawmill on 13 acres of property owned by his father. Then he set to work cutting the trees and sawing them into everything from six-inch-thick wall sections to quarter-inch-thick trim.

Woollett began his economy project in April 1974.

"I made a lot of mistakes," he says in explaining how he gained his expertise in the art of house construction and sawmill operation.

The "Jimmy" diesel engine that runs the sawmill was given to Woollett after a fellow woodsman junked out a broken down Cat. Other parts drifted in from logger and nonlogger friends alike. The diesel engine drives not only the blade but the carriage that carries the logs to their destination. The carriage is driven through an old Chevrolet Powerglide transmission which Woollett hooked up for use in low and reverse gears.

Most of the furniture in the Woollett's three-bedroom house is built in. Mrs. Woollett says that was just another cost-saving move.

The home will be heated by a wood space heater located in the living room. Woollett estimated that during the toughest winter he uses less than six cords of wood to heat the house.

"I was all right until I started doing the wiring," Woollett said. "Then I found out building a house could cost some money."

Up to then, he had invested less than $500 in the project.

Woollett says he has a home with all the modern conveniences — indoor plumbing, electric lights and cook stove — without many of the modern annoyances, like a mortgage.

"When we move in, the place will be ours," Woollett says.

"He's proud of his work," says Mrs. Woollett. "And he loves to beat the system."

Father of four economizes by building the family home

LACEY, Wash. (AP) — Building costs were high, at times over $20 a square foot, so Dan Woollett built his own sawmill, borrowed and begged materials and turned the gifts into a new house.

"If I had to spend any money on it, I probably wouldn't have it," said Woollett, 26, a father of four.

Using begged, borrowed and donated parts, Woollett built his own sawmill on 13 acres of property owned by his father. Then he set to work cutting the trees and sawing them into everything from six-inch-thick wall sections to quarter-inch-thick trim.

Woollett began his economy project in April 1974.

"I made a lot of mistakes," he says in explaining how he gained his expertise in the art of house construction and sawmill operation.

The "Jimmy" diesel engine that runs the sawmill was given to Woollett after a fellow woodsman junked out a broken down Cat. Other parts drifted in from logger and nonlogger friends alike. The diesel engine drives not only the blade but the carriage that carries the logs to their destination. Uranium enrichment project proposed

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 30 years of nonprofit uranium enrichment by a government monopoly, the Ford administration is promoting a private enrichment venture requiring so much federal support that nuclear fuel costs would rise some $700 million a year, or 34 per cent.

Electricity consumers would pay the bill.

Administration officials say a private plant, planned for Dothan, Ala., would avoid some $2.8 billion of taxpayer investment for the alternative, a new government plant at Portsmouth, Ohio, and would "pave the way" for private enterprise and competition.

But, in an Associated Press investigation, a key government official conceded that the taxpayers would have to invest up to $1 billion to launch the private project; that electric utilities would pay 34 pper cent more for atomic fuel to support the private operation; and that the project alone would bring neither private enterprise nor competition into uranium enrichment.

The investigation also shows that a new government plant could bring the U.S. Treasury more money than the taxes and royalties from a private plant, and yet at the same time charge consumers less.

The U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration — ERDA — is expanding the three existing government plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth.

There is general agreement that a fourth plant is needed, but disagreement whether it should be a Portsmouth "add-on," or the private plant proposed by the Uranium Enrichment Associates — UEA — a partnership of Bechtel Corp., Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. and The Williams Companies, an oil-fertilizers-and-steel conglomerate.

ERDA, which concluded a year ago that the UEA proposal "does not achieve most goals of private enrichment" now is pushing it.

The UEA plant would use time-tested government technology and produce the same amount of uranium enrichment as a government "add-on," at roughly the same production cost, says ERDA.

But there the resemblance stops.

ERDA officials admit the UEA project would:

—Require government guarantees that the plant would work.

—Require the government to buy and stockpile a large chunk of UEA's early production to keep the plant operating at full capacity.

—Charge higher prices and require the government to raise its own prices to persuade customers to deal with UEA.

—Collect production costs plus after-tax profits of 15 per cent on equity investment, providing little incentive to restrain costs in a project whose chief contractors would be UEA partners Bechtel and Goodyear.

—Require close government supervision of UEA cost-control to protect both the taxpayer and the consumer.

—Drain 60 per cent of UEA's profits and interest payments out of the U.S. economy to anticipated foreign investors and lenders.

—And expose the government to the risk of having to take over a floundering, half-finished project if UEA can't complete it.

ERDA strongly supported an administration bill, the proposed "Nuclear Fuel Assurance Act," to make all this possible.

The congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy recently completed hearings on it and received a report by the General Accounting Office urging government construction of the next uranium enrichment plant.

ERDA Administrator Robert C. Seamans Jr., expressed the same view to President Ford and Budget Director James T. Lynn a year ago. After ERDA officials met with the Office of Management and Budget, the Federal Energy Administration, UEA and the White House, however, Seamans changed his mind.

Two of former President Richard M. Nixon's budget directors, George P. Shultz and Caspar W. Weinberger, are now directors of Bechtel Corp., a large construction firm whose stock is owned only by the Bechtel family and the corporate officers.

These Bechtel stockholders stand to reap some $26 million a year in profits from the UEA project if no additional U.S. partners are brought into the deal, and perhaps even more since UEA plans to award Bechtel the contract, worth an estimated $250 million, to build the plant.

Another UEA partner Goodyear, which operates the government's Portsmouth plant under contract, also is slated to operate the proposed UEA plant.

Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., chairman of the joint committtee, said during its hearings that the proposal seemed to guarantee UEA a profit and might amount to "another big giveaway program."

Ford administration witnesses — Seamans, Lynn, FEA Administrator Frank G. Zarb, Economic Adviser Paul W. MacAvoy, and Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas S. Kauper — argued in favor of the UEA project and said it would save taxpayers some $2.8 billion, the cost of a new government plant.

But Jarvis L. Schwennesen, ERDA's assistant director for uranium enrichment and head of a government task force on the UEA proposal, admitted in a recent interview that the "saving" may be a billion dollars less than advertised.

In the enrichment program, the government does not sell uranium to atomic power utilities; they have to bring their own. The government charges them for making their uranium suitable for atomic fuel by "enriching" it: concentrating one kind of uranium, U-235, and separating out its near-twin, U-238.

UEA's proposal requests "a commitment that USG (the U.S. government) will purchase from UEA enriching service up to six million SWUs (enrichment units)," to help the private plant get started.

Schwennesen said the U.S. Treasury would have to lay out up to $1 billion for these support purchases and stockpile this enriched uranium up to 10 years.

Interest lost by the Treasury on that outlay could total $358 million or more, which ERDA would have to charge its own customers, he said.

Meanwhile, uranium enrichment could not remain nonprofit as it is now.

Administration documents estimate that UEA would pay some $70 million a year in taxes and royalties and collect another $79 million as its 15 per cent profit, thus charging customers some $149 million more than an alternative nonprofit government plant.

To do this, UEA estimates, it would charge $85 per enrichment unit, compared with the government's average price of $54 at its three existing, lower-cost plants.

Because the government plants now are fully committed and could not take on potential UEA customers, there would be no competition between them, said Schwennesen. As UEA chairman Jerome W. Komes testified, "You are sold out, and we are the only store open in town."

But continuation of the government's low, nonprofit prices, Schwennesen said, would make atomic utilities balk at paying UEA's higher price. So ERDA has asked Congress to abandon nonprofit operation and to authorize "commercial" pricing which, the bill specifies, "will not discourage" private enrichment plants.

ERDA proposed a $76 support price which would cost the government's enrichment customers and, eventually, their electricity consumers an additional $510 million a year.

Hill to receive Alumni Merit Award from SeMo U

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A longtime southeast Missouri educator and an internal medicine specialist in Newton, Kan., will receive Alumni Merit Awards Sunday at Southeast Missouri State University's spring commencement.

Thurston S. Hill, superintendent of schools at Dexter for 35 years, and Dr. Frances Ann Allen, who has a private practice and is also an associate professor of medicine at the University of Kansas, will become 31st and 32nd individuals honored with Alumni Merit Awards since the university's Alumni Association instituted the program in 1958.

Recipients of the awards are chosen by a confidential committee of the association from nominations submitted to the university's director of alumni activities, Mrs. Jane Stacy.

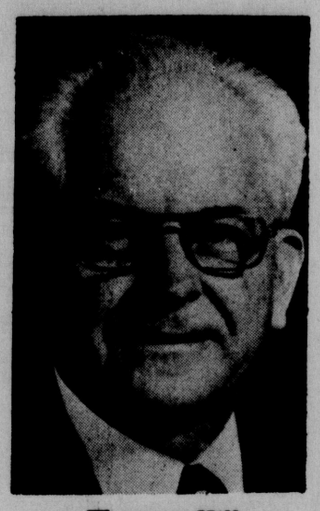
Guidelines state that one or two awards may be given annually. One award must go to a Southeast Missouri State graduate, while the other may be given to any former student at the university.

This year's winners are both graduates of the institution. Hill earned his bachelor's degree in 1936 and Dr. Allen received hers in 1937.

Last spring, merit citations were presented to Dr. W. T. Doherty Jr., chairman of the history department at West Virginia University in Morgantown, W. Va., and Dr. Jerry Clark McNeely, a former professor at University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., who is now devoting full-time to television writing and production.

This year's recipients will personally receive their citations during the graduation exercise from Robert Acord of St. Louis, president of the Alumni Association.

Dr. Francis Allen



Thurston Hill

The commencement for the 856 members of the spring class will begin at 4 p.m. in Houck Stadium. Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, president of West Texas State University, will be the speaker. Dr. Watkins is also an alumnus of Southeast Missouri State.

During his long tenure as superintendent of schools at Dexter, Hill has led the school system through five major building programs, and voters have never rejected a bond issue or a tax levy for any school purpose.

A native of Stoddard County, Hill's career as an educator also includes teaching in a one-room rural school, teaching mathematics and science at the high school level, part-time college teaching and serving as a high school principal.

He has done graduate work at the University of Missouri and George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn.

Hill has been president of the Missouri State High School Activities Association, the Southeast Missouri District Teachers Association, Phi Delta Kappa, the Southeast Missouri State University Alumni Association and the Missouri Association of School Administrators.

In 1970, he was cited by the district teachers association for distinguished service to education, and in 1971 he was awarded a citation for outstanding achievement and meritorious service in education by the University of Missouri Alumni Association.

Active in community work, he has been on the board of directors of Dexter Memorial Hospital, Dexter Public Library, Dexter Chamber of Commerce and Missouri Utilities Co. In 1975, the Missouri Municipal League presented a certificate of appreciation to him for "outstanding leadership on behalf of his city and state."

In 1936, Hill married the former Mary Ann Hastings of Lutesville, and they are the parents of three children, Mrs. Marilyn Jo Lincoln of Washington, D.C., Dr. Ronald T. Hill, a surgeon in Dexter; and Sue Ellen Hill, a teacher in the Cape Girardeau public schools.

Dr. Allen, who was born in Doniphan, majored in history and physical education at Southeat Missouri State and, after graduation, also embarked upon a career in education, becoming a teacher at Normandy High School in St. Louis.

However, in 1939, she entered the University of Kansas School of Medicine. After completing her medical degree, she served an internship at the University of Iowa Medical School and was a general practritioner in Newton, Kan., for nine years.

In 1953, she returned to the medical school at Kansas for specialization in internal medicine. During this three-year period of postgraduate study, Dr. Allen participated in research involving the radioactive isotope of red blood cell survival time in liver disease. This research was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Returning to Newton, she became chairman of the Medical Department of Bethal Deaconess Hospital and earned recognition as a leader in research on the treatment of Parkinson's Disease, authoring a number of publications and papers on the topic.

Dr. Allen relinquished her position as head of the hospital's medical department in 1969.

TRCC to celebrate 10th anniversary

POPLAR BLUFF— The 10th anniversary of Three Rivers Community College will be celebrated Sunday with an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. The program will begin with remarks by Dr. H. Tudor Westover, college president, in the auditorium at the main academic building.

The TRCC chorus will then present a program featuring American music. Refreshments will be served by members of the TRCC chapter of Phi Theta Kappa, a national junior college honor society. Guests will be free to tour the college facilities at the conclusion of the program.

TRCC was established April 5, 1966, and the first students enrolled in June 1967. During the first fall semester, 482 students were enrolled. Today, approximately 1,500 studnets are enrolled at the college. The college has grown from a limited academic transfer program to three separate divisions. Three Rivers has developed into a community college serving students of all ages with a variety of educational goals.

The main college building was originally the only school facility. While it is still in use, 10 other buildings have been added to the "storefront" campus. Buildings throughout the downtown area have been rented, remodeled and refurbished to provide classrooms and other facilities.

In addition to the original academic program, which have been greatly expanded, TRCC now offers seven occupational programs designed to prepare students for careers in two years. Basic skill courses in English and mathematics are offered at remedial and developmental levels. Counseling services are well developed in all divisions of the college.

The greatest growth in the past few years at the college has been in the Continuing Education Division. Courses in this division are designed to meet special interests or educational needs without obtaining degrees. Courses are given in response to community interest and request.

The college is the center for social, cultural and physical activities for many student and adults in the community. In addition to the academic services it provides, the school also provides leadership for workshops, demonstrations and seminars for the community.

TRCC is fully accredited by the State Board of Education and by the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges. Students pay only $125 tuition per semester, and more than $500,000 is available in financial aid.

The main purpose of Three Rivers is to respond to the educational needs of the community as fully as possible. The college exists for everyone interested in learning. TRCC students are young, old, veterans, high school graduates, GED certificate recipients, businessmen, homemakers, farmers and others from a wide variety of backgrounds.

Many graduates of TRCC have transferred to four-year colleges and many others are presently holding responsible positions with businesses, hospitals and other enterprises throughout the area. During its 10-year existence, TRCC has

New chairman named at SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Dr. John Crampton, a member of the Southeast Missouri State University faculty since 1965, will be chairman of the university's new department of accounting and finance, President Robert Leestamper said Saturday.

The appointment, which must be confirmed by the Board of Regents, will take effect July 1 when the university undergoes an academic reorganization.

The reorganization from a divisional to a college arrangement has been approved by the regents. In addition to the creation of six undergraduate colleges, the reorganization calls for 12 new academic departments and consolidates the men's and women's physical education departments into a single unit.

Dr. Leestamper earlier announced the names of the individuals he will recommend to head the consolidated department and five of the new departments.

The department of accounting and finance will be part of the College of Business. Previously, all business courses at Southeast Missouri State were under the wing of an omnibus department of business administration and business education.

In the new college, Dr. Louise Reddick will be chairwoman of the department of management and Dr. Jim Briney will be chairman of the department of computer science. Chairpersons for administration are yet to be selected.

Dr. Crampton, who was born in Carl Junction in Jasper County, earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees at Kansas State College of Pittsburg. He received his d :torate in accounting at the University of Missouri.

He began his career as an educator as a bookkeeping teacher at Joplin High School. He was an accounting instructor at the University of Missouri before coming to Cape Girardeau.

Dr. Crampton is a member of the Missouri State Teachers Association, the Missouri Association of Accounting Educators and the American Accounting Association.

He has served on several university faculty committees and is co-sponsor of the Accounting Club.

He and his wife Winona are the parents of a daughter named Jeneva, and the family home is at 2228 Hillbrook Drive.

Hill to receive Alumni Merit Award from SeMo U

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A longtime southeast Missouri educator and an internal medicine specialist in Newton, Kan., will receive Alumni Merit Awards Sunday at Southeast Missouri State University's spring commencement.

Thurston S. Hill, superintendent of schools at Dexter for 35 years, and Dr. Frances Ann Allen, who has a private practice and is also an associate professor of medicine at the University of Kansas, will become 31st and 32nd individuals honored with Alumni Merit Awards since the university's Alumni Association instituted the program in 1958.

Recipients of the awards are chosen by a confidential committee of the association from nominations submitted to the university's director of alumni activities, Mrs. Jane Stacy.

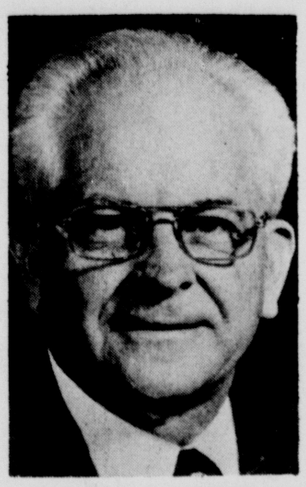
Guidelines state that one or two awards may be given annually. One award must go to a Southeast Missouri State graduate, while the other may be given to any former student at the university.

This year's winners are both graduates of the institution. Hill earned his bachelor's degree in 1936 and Dr. Allen received hers in 1937.

Last spring, merit citations were presented to Dr. W. T. Doherty Jr., chairman of the history department at West Virginia University in Morgantown, W. Va., and Dr. Jerry Clark McNeely, a former professor at University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., who is now devoting full-time to television writing and production.

This year's recipients will personally receive their citations during the graduation exercise from Robert Acord of St. Louis, president of the Alumni Association.

Dr. Francis Allen



Thurston Hill

The commencement for the 856 members of the spring class will begin at 4 p.m. in Houck Stadium. Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, president of West Texas State University, will be the speaker. Dr. Watkins is also an alumnus of Southeast Missouri State.

During his long tenure as superintendent of schools at Dexter, Hill has led the school system through five major building programs, and voters have never rejected a bond issue or a tax levy for any school purpose.

A native of Stoddard County, Hill's career as an educator also includes teaching in a one-room rural school, teaching mathematics and science at the high school level, part-time college teaching and serving as a high school principal.

He has done graduate work at the University of Missouri and George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn.

Hill has been president of the Missouri State High School Activities Association, the Southeast Missouri District Teachers Association, Phi Delta Kappa, the Southeast Missouri State University Alumni Association and the Missouri Association of School Administrators.

In 1970, he was cited by the district teachers association for distinguished service to education, and in 1971 he was awarded a citation for outstanding achievement and meritorious service in education by the University of Missouri Alumni Association.

Active in community work, he has been on the board of directors of Dexter Memorial Hospital, Dexter Public Library, Dexter Chamber of Commerce and Missouri Utilities Co. In 1975, the Missouri Municipal League presented a certificate of appreciation to him for "outstanding leadership on behalf of his city and state."

In 1936, Hill married the former Mary Ann Hastings of Lutesville, and they are the parents of three children, Mrs. Marilyn Jo Lincoln of Washington, D.C., Dr. Ronald T. Hill, a surgeon in Dexter; and Sue Ellen Hill, a teacher in the Cape Girardeau public schools.

Dr. Allen, who was born in Doniphan, majored in history and physical education at Southeat Missouri State and, after graduation, also embarked upon a career in education, becoming a teacher at Normandy High School in St. Louis.

However, in 1939, she entered the University of Kansas School of Medicine. After completing her medical degree, she served an internship at the University of Iowa Medical School and was a general practritioner in Newton, Kan., for nine years.

In 1953, she returned to the medical school at Kansas for specialization in internal medicine. During this three-year period of postgraduate study, Dr. Allen participated in research involving the radioactive isotope of red blood cell survival time in liver disease. This research was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Returning to Newton, she became chairman of the Medical Department of Bethal Deaconess Hospital and earned recognition as a leader in research on the treatment of Parkinson's Disease, authoring a number of publications and papers on the topic.

Dr. Allen relinquished her position as head of the hospital's medical department in 1969.

Nessen rating not in yet

NEW YORK (AP) — How many viewers cheered or criticized White House press secretary Ron Nessen's April 17 guest-host turn on NBC's rowdy, tasteless-to-some "Saturday Night" show? NBC claims it doesn't know yet.

A spokesman says NBC hasn't finished compiling all the mail containing viewer reaction to Nessen's appearance on the show. He also says it isn't known yet when the task will be completed and the results announced.

However, he says the viewer reaction so far appears no heavier than usual for other "Saturday Night" shows.

In the Nessen show, in which President Ford himself made three brief, taped appearances, the press secretary took part in a skit poking fun at Ford's intelligence and physical coordination.

But neither man took part in the most-criticized parts of the show: a film short in a men's room showing a group of men singing a roundelay while standing at urinals, a spoof of a feminine hygiene product, and a skit depicting the Supreme Court observing the conduct of an unmarried couple in bed.

While some TV critics praised Nessen's work on the show, others felt he'd demeaned the White House. One non-TV columnist in Washington called the show "incredibly crude and offensive, and pathetically unfunny to boot."

Lorne Michaels, the young producer of "Saturday Night," says he has no idea of how many viewers wrote NBC to cheer or jeer the program. He says he only gets "show mail," letters sent him and the show's cast.

He had no figures on how much mail in that category came in, but he said it seemed "evenly divided" between huzzahs and hisses.

He said because of heavy advance publicity about Nessen's appearance on the late-night show, "we got a lot of letters from areas of the country — Texas, for one — that we don't usually get."

Michaels, asked if he heard from Ford after the show, said no, although Nessen had sent him a letter "which was quite nice."
